Forced Loans To U.S. Being Studied As Inflation Bar

Compulsion Weighed As Bond Purchases Fall Off and Congress Balks at More Taxes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Forced loans to the Government, redeemable after the war, were under consideration last night for inclusion in the Administration's over-all inflation controls in lieu of sharp increases in the present tax program.

Extension of tax recommendations beyond the existing seven to nine-billion-dollar goals was reliably reported "out of the picture," but both voluntary and compulsory methods of augmenting the Treasury's war chest were reported under study.

In one unusually well-informed quarter it was said that voluntarily induced bond purchases were preferred both by Administration and Congressional tax draftsmen, "but it looks like we will have to come to forced loans either this year or next, and it might as well start this year."

Bond Purchase Decline

Voluntary defense bond purchases have progressively fallen off since the first of the year. The new program, expected to be included in some form in the Administration's forthcoming antiinflation recommendations, or to be injected later before final passage of the tax bill, would serve the dual purpose of supplying the Government with ready cash and applying the brakes to excess consumer spending.

Among the compulsory plans under study are proposals for 85 to 100 per cent excess profits tax, with a given percentage remitted to corporate taxpayers in the form of bonds that would bear interest and become negotiable only after the war. A 5 to 10 per cent graduated withholding tax on individual salaries likewise would be paid back in the form of nonnegotiable, noninterest bearing bonds, under one plan proposed.

Goal—"All We Can Get"

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means committee called at the White House yesterday, and later told reporters he knew of no plans to augment existing tax goals of seven to nine billion dollars.

He said the committee was not bound to the Treasury goals, and he would like to raise more "if we could get more without crippling and shattering the national economy or doing injustices to individuals

Replace Oil Burners Now, OPA Warns

Home owners in Atlantic Seaboard States and in Oregon and Washington were warned yesterday by the Office of Price Administration to convert their oil burners back to coal furnaces where possible, because of indications that additional curtailment of petroleum consumption may be necessary in those States as the war continues.

Dan A. West, director of OPA's consumer division, who issued the warning, advised householders to install coal grates immediately and to stock their coal bins now for next winter.

Simultaneously the War Production Board banned the manufacture after May 31 of oil burners and coal stokers for residential use and limited production of commercial and industrial types to orders with high preference ratings.

In a second order affecting the household front the WPB froze all stocks of new plumbing and heating equipment except for retail sales of $5 or less, or on a priority rating.

The order covers any equipment, fixture, fitting, pipe, or accessory of a type used in or connected to a water, sewer or gas system, or any primary heating unit or accessory designed to provide building warmth. It does not cover used equipment or tools, or hoses, sprinklers and similar devices attached to outdoor faucets.

It was not clear last night whether the $5 limit on retail sales would prevent homeowners from purchasing the coal grates which the OPA desires them to install.

Head Crushed, Throat Slashed

D. C. Girl, 20, Victim Of Hammer Slaying

Her head crushed by a hammer and her throat slashed by a butcher knife, the body of a 25-year-old girl was discovered late last night in a small apartment at 1422 N Street Northwest.

Police tentatively identified the girl early this morning as Madeleine Matthes, of the 1300 block M Street Northwest.

The blood-covered partly-disrobed body, hastily wedged into a closet, was found by police, directed to the scene by a sportily-clad 17-year-old youth, who strode into the First Precinct Police Station last night and informed Lieut. Herbert H. Umbaugh that he would find "trouble" in the apartment.

"Most Brutal Crime"

The youth identified himself as Richard L. Wilhite, a theater usher, living in the apartment where the murdered girl was found.

Police said the girl had been brutally beaten with a claw hammer and stabbed and slashed with a butcher knife. Lieut. Jeremiah Flaherty, of the homicide squad, characterized the murder as the "most brutal crime" he had ever seen.

Dead Several Hours

As far as could be immediately determined, the girl, a member of Jehovah's Witnesses, had entered the apartment house during the afternoon, carrying the portable phonograph which members of her religious group use to propagate their opinions.

Royalty-Free Alcoa Patents Forced by U. S.

Consent Decree Filed; 4 Corporations Fined On Trust Charges

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

In a New York court and before a Senate committee, the Government struck a series of blows yesterday at gigantic alignments of German and American industries accused of stunting the growth of vital war production through monopolistic, price-controlling practices.

Alcoa Patents Freed

The attacks were aimed at seven corporations, or their subsidiaries, which are numbered among the Nation's industrial giants. Without exception, officials of the concerns responded with denials of wrongdoing or impeding this country's race for arms superiority over the Axis.

These were the day's developments:

1. Acting to speed the production and fabrication of magnesium, a light, tough metal essential to manufacture of dive-bombers and incendiary bombs, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, the Justice Department's "trust buster," filed a consent decree providing for compulsory free licensing of patents now held by the Aluminum Co. of America and other corporations.

2. The Associated Press reported that, at the same time, the Aluminum Co., the American Magnesium Corp., Dow Chemical Co., and the Magnesium Development Corp. were handed Federal Court fines of $25,000 each and the General Aniline and Film Corp., a $15,000 fine. The penalties were the result of pleas of nolo contendre by the companies to a series of Sherman anti-trust indictments charging restraint of trade and monopolization of the production and fabrication of aluminum. A Justice Department official defined nolo contendre as being equivalent to con-

Hugh Johnson Dies; Rites Set For Tomorrow

General Who Set Up And Ran NRA Passes At 59 in Hotel Here

Gen. Hugh Samuel Johnson, one of the most colorful and dynamic personalities ever to dominate the Washington scene, will be buried with military honors tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery.

The 59-year-old hard-driving, tough-talking soldier, lawyer, economist and newspaper columnist, worn down by a life of ceaseless activity, succumbed to a pneumonia attack at 4:45 a. m. yesterday in his Wardman Park Hotel apartment here.

Services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Fort Myer Chapel, with Chaplain J. C. W. Linsley officiating.

Honorary pallbearers will include Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier; Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, and six members of Gen. Johnson's 1903 West Point graduation class.

"Old Ironpants," as the general was known in every spot of the United States when he organized and directed the NRA in early New Deal days, went down fighting. Despite doctor's orders he wrote his last column 12 hours before death came, then lapsed into a coma four hours later.

Only six weeks ago he was released from Walter Reed Hospital, where he had been admitted in late October with an attack of influenza, and although for a time he appeared headed for recovery, complications culminated in the pneumonia attack last weekend.

At his bedside when death came were his son, Lieut. Col. Kilbourne Johnston, who restored to his name the "t" his grandfather had dropped; a brother, Alexander Johnston, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Michael R. London, of Washington, old friends, and two members of Gen. Johnson's secretarial staff, Miss Frances Robinson and Mrs. Marian Tracy.

Sailor Ladies

Navy Hopes to Enlist Women For Noncombatant Shore Duty

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

With a more liberal offer than that recently held out by the Army, the Navy yesterday moved to establish a woman's auxiliary reserve to take over many shore duties now performed by "seaworthy" men.

After listening to Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of the Navy Bureau of Navigation, warn that the Nation's ship expansion program will bring acute man-power shortage, the House Naval Affairs Committee voted unanimous approval for a bill to "let women into the Navy."

The measure was introduced by Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, and would entitle women to full sailor pay and benefits.

The Army bill, sponsored by the War Department and introduced by Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers, calls for establishment of a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps to serve with the Army—not in it. Officer pay in the WAACS and also the compensation benefits would be less than those for regular soldiers.

"We are letting them in on an equal footing, actually taking them in," Representative Maas said last night. "They will be doing almost the same type of noncombatant work as women serving with the Army will do, but, of course, the Navy is making the more attractive offer."

No limit on the number of women who can volunteer for Navy service was set by the committee, and no

U.S. Holds Up Relief Ships To French

France's Mr. Big

LAVAL TO SERVE as "civil supervisor of all France" in new Vichy cabinet to be announced today, Bern hears. Page 2.

International Chess

The United States yesterday held up the sailing of ships in which it was planned to send nonmilitary supplies to French North Africa and Unoccupied France itself, then delayed definite decision on its policy toward the new Laval-dominated Government of France until tomorrow.

Sudden rise to power at Vichy of Pierre Laval, foremost advocate of French collaboration with Germany, was bringing, meanwhile, a determined reexamination by American Government officials of this country's relations with the Vichy government, with State Department officials waiting only until Laval's new cabinet is completed and takes office tomorrow before issuing a statement on the new situation.

Americans Advised to Leave

Word came from Vichy during the day that United States Consulates had asked all Americans still in France to return to this country at the earliest possible opportunity. Officials here emphasized that the issuance of the request had nothing to do with Laval's return to power, and in fact the State Department had not been officially advised that such action had been taken. News dispatches from France indicated that American consuls had given the advice in view of the fact that Americans soon will have an opportunity to return on a ship that is to make the crossing in an exchange of American and Axis diplomats.

Directly attributable to the Laval success, however, was this country's halting of plans to send nonmilitary supplies to French North Africa and a Red Cross ship to the unoccupied area of France.

Milk, Clothing for Children

Acting Secretary of State Welles announced at his press conference that the Government was holding up the sailing of two ships loaded with food, fuel and cotton goods for the French in North Africa and a Red Cross ship that was to carry medical supplies, condensed milk and children's clothing to that portion of France still under Vichy control.

He declined to say whether Ambassador William D. Leahy would be called home from France for "consulation," a step falling short of an outright break in relations but a plain manifestation of disapproval if the Ambassador is retained in this country. It was recalled that such a step was taken toward Germany, and neither the United States nor Germany had an ambassador actually in the other's country for more than a year before this country entered the war last December.

Our Bombers Sink 5 Jap Ships In 4000-Mile Philippine Raid; MacArthur Command Upheld

Pacific Council Agrees That He's In Charge of All Forces in Area

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Representatives of the Pacific War Council declared last night that complete agreement had been reached between the United States, Australia and New Zealand, over the scope of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command in the Southwest Pacific.

They backed up President Roosevelt's statement on Tuesday that MacArthur was in supreme command in the area—a declaration that was followed yesterday morning by an apparently conflicting statement from the American general's headquarters in Australia.

Dispatches from the far Pacific quoted a spokesman for MacArthur as saying that the general still was only the commander of American forces in the Far East and Australia.

The spokesman said MacArthur had been unable to set up an Allied command in the Southwest Pacific because thus far he had failed to receive instructions from Washington defining the geographical scope of his authority.

New Zealand Issue

The principal question in the air seemed to be whether or not New Zealand was a part of MacArthur's command.

Here in Washington, the White House reiterated the President's statement that the American general was in supreme command of all Allied forces in the area and doubted that there was any confusion on MacArthur's part as to the scope of his authority.

Following a White House meeting of the Pacific War Council yesterday, members said there was no conflict between the interested United Nations in the matter.

Herbert A. Evatt, Australian minister of external affairs, said upon emerging from the meeting late yesterday that the jurisdiction of Gen. MacArthur had been settled by the United States and Australia. He indicated that President Roosevelt would make an immediate statement in the matter.

"Ironed Out Long Ago"

"It was ironed out long ago," Evatt told reporters. The President probably will make a statement tonight. I hope he will."

The New Zealand Minister, Walter Nash, said that "all of the particulars" pertaining to MacArthur's jurisdiction had been presented to his government. He added that "we are all in complete agreement, the United States, Australia and New Zealand."

Nash said that his Government is "satisfied with everything that has been done," but he left it to President Roosevelt to explain what the arrangement is and whether

A Little Revenge for Bataan

LIEUT. COL. DAVIES | BRIG. GEN. ROYCE | CAPT. BOSTROM

Flying Officers Cited for Raid on Jap Bases

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

United States Army Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), April 16.—Lieut. Col. J. H. Davies, who led one group of the United States Army B-25 bombers which attacked Japanese bases in the Philippines Monday and Tuesday, said today that "we smacked hell out of 'em and gained at least a little revenge for members of our squadron who fought in the front line trenches in Pataan."

Davies and his crew had hoped to reach their objectives in time to relieve their friends on the Bataan front, but found that Bataan already had fallen and many of their friends were missing, killed, wounded or captured.

Consequently they pressed home the attacks with complete disregard of their own safety and, as Davies said, "cut the score down a little."

"Our group downed at least one and possibly two seaplanes at Davao

Widespread Damage Effected on Enemy Facilities at Cebu, Davao and Manila

By the Associated Press

U. S. Army Headquarters in Australia, April 15.—In the most spectacular aerial thrust of the Pacific war, 13 American Army bombers based in Australia heavily assaulted Japanese bases on three Philippine Islands to redeem the first installment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's pledge that the invaders would yet be cast out of his lodgements there.

This great striking force, which covered 4000 miles in the round trip to Manila and at least 2800 miles to and from Davao on Mindanao Island, accomplished its mission with the loss of but a single plane—and that plane's entire crew was saved.

Five Jap Ships Sunk

The results:

Five Japanese transports and supply ships sunk, at least three others squarely hit; a large number of enemy planes destroyed or put out of action; widespread damage to enemy docks, military warehouses and like facilities.

[A United Press dispatch said the Americans returned with some evacuees from the beleaguered islands. There was no immediate report on how many there were.]

The Americans were personally commanded by Brig. Gen. Ralph Royce. Just as he climbed from his plane on his return the general, by the direction of President Roosevelt, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, Gen. Rush Lincoln making the presentation in behalf of Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, Allied air commander for the southwest Pacific.

One Was Grounded

[Although Royce was in personal command of the raid, he did not pilot a plane on the bombing attacks because the one he intended to fly was grounded by engine defects, a United Press dispatch reported.]

Decorated with the cross, too, were Lieut. Col. John Hubert Davies, of Piedmont, Calif., and Capt. Frank P. Bostrom, native of Maine.

In telling about the raid, Davies indicated that the Americans landed somewhere in the Philippines, since he said Cebu was attacked twice in one day and that Davao was attacked the following day. He commanded one group of the ten B-25 bombers participating in the raids. The other three planes were B-17 Flying Fortresses.

(The Flying Fortresses might make the round trip without stopping. The B-25's, however, could not have remained in the air continuously for both ways. They are understood to have a round-trip range, loaded, of about 1800 miles, so the inference was that they re-

Drastic Proposal

The House Naval Committee yesterday reported that "carelessness and lack of proper supervision" were responsible for the burning of the Normandie and recommended that the Navy take over the merchant marine.

"The operation of merchant vessels of the United States should be placed under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Navy and such vessels together with their personnel should operate as an auxiliary to the Navy," the committee said, in one of 23 recommendations.

Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the committee, said such a move already has been considered by the Administration. He predicted action in the near future, without legislation. Vinson said some legislation may be needed to absorb merchant marine seamen into the Navy.

The committee failed to find any evidence of sabotage in the burning and capsizing of the 83,000-ton former French luxury liner, but it said opportunities for sabotage were abundant and recommended

Full-Scale Attack Aiming to Isolate Chinese From India

Fleet Action Urged

Threat to Highway

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, April 15.—The Japanese launched a sudden, major offensive into the Shan states of eastern Burma today, opening a full-fledged new front to isolate China from Burma and India at a time when British and Chinese alike are fighting a desperate rearguard action to delay the conquest of central Burma's oil wealth.

The offensive, launched in the Salween River region near the upper Thailand border where Japanese and Chinese troops have been sparring inconclusively for weeks, apparently was aimed at cutting the Mandalay-Lashio Railroad.

Its object also would be to separate the Chinese forces in the Shan states from those in the Sittang River Valley to the southwest.

The Mandalay-Lashio railroad is the last feeder link to the old Burma Road, and also would be used as part of the new routes planned from India to China, across upper Burma.

Chungking reports disclosed the new offensive, nearly 200 miles northeast of the present active Burma battle zones, on a day in which

'Corregidor Can And Will Be Held,' Wainwright Says

"Corregidor can and will be held," Maj. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright declared in his order of the day Sunday to troops on that Japanese-stormed fortress in the Philippines, according to delayed messages received here yesterday.

"There can be no question of surrendering this mighty fortress to the enemy; it will be defended with all the resources at our command," the general declared.

"All men who have served here before will remain at their posts," the order said; "those who have come from Bataan will be assigned to appropriate tasks and battle stations. Bataan has fallen but Corregidor will carry on. On this mighty fortress, a pearl of great price on which the enemy has set his covetour eyes, the spirit of Bataan will continue to live."

Major Decision

Stay in Unions, WLB Orders Workers in Eight War Plants

By the Associated Press

The War Labor Board, handing down a decision of major import, directed yesterday that "a maintenance of union membership" plan be established in eight Middle Western plants of the International Harvester Co., provided the plan is approved in an election to be conducted by the board among the union members.

The decision, made on an 8 to 4 vote, involves plants where 25,000 employes are working on war goods. The board voted unanimously for pay increases, and for pay for union representatives during the time they spend settling grievances.

Union Shop Demanded

The C. I. O. and A. F. L. had demanded a union shop ruling under which union membership would be required as a condition of employment.

On this question the board directed that, subject to an election which it will conduct in each plant, those employes who are members of the certified union at the time of the contract or who join later must continue members in good standing for the life of the contract as a condition of employment. The vote will be only among members of the union certified by the National Relations Board as the collective bargaining agent for the plant. It will not affect members of the minority union or nonunion employes of a plant.

Agreement Reached

The unions involved are the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Organizing committee and two locals of the A. F. of L. Federal Labor Union. The plants are at Chicago, East Moline, Rock Island and Rockfalls, Ill.; Springfield, Ohio, and Milwaukee, Wis.

In demanding a union shop, the C. I. O. and A. F. L. told the board that they were willing that A. F. L. members join the C. I. O. in plants where the latter had been certified as the bargaining agent, with the C. I. O. members doing the same in A. F. L. plants.

Pay-Increase Granted

The four employer members of the board dissented from the WLB solution of the union security issue "because it does not preserve the right of the union members to individual choice."

Chairman William H. Davis, of the board, said that the elections would be held as soon as possible after the David Baxter—defeatist spokesman, revolutionist society pamphleteer and "man of the hour" of the vermin press—is due to be called before the special grand jury on Axis agents today.

A hulking man in cowboy boots, with deep-set eyes and broad shoulders, Baxter was summoned from his California headquarters last week. But his questioning was delayed.

The grand jury is deep in the investigation of a bloc of widely scattered defeatist papers, which is being pressed by the Department of Justice under the generalship of the chief of the criminal division, Wendell Berge.

In this inquiry, Baxter is regarded as a key witness.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan may look to him for an explanation of the propaganda mailed by the Social Republic Society, a secret group calling themselves "Socis" for short. The Socis leaders, who declare they will never be known to the American people, state that they will seize control of an American revolution, for which they say the Nation is ripe.

U. S. Fleet Urged To Act in Pacific

War Sidelights

Bretons Using British Arms Battle Nazis

London (Thursday), April 16 (AP). Bretons at St. Nazaire took up sporadic street fighting against the Germans with British firearms after the spectacular British raid on the German-held French port March 28, the Daily Mail said today.

The Bretons managed to get hold of both guns and ammunition after the raid, began shooting immediately and have engaged in desultory frays ever since the raid, the Mail story, dated Madrid, continued.

The Mail's informants said a large number of hostages had been shot—one report put the number as high as 500—and that since the raid all prisons and concentration camps in the area have been filled to capacity.

After the St. Nazaire raid, it was recalled, the Germans threw a cordon around the area and street fighting between the Commando troops and Nazis went on for a long time after the main body of the English forces had withdrawn.

New R. A. F. Incendiary

London, April 15 (U.P.).—The R. A. F. is using a new type of incendiary bomb that is heavier than the Germans employ, reports from foreign sources today. The bomb contains phosphorus, making it very difficult to extinguish by ordinary methods.

Large numbers were said to have been dropped by parachutes in different parts of Germany, causing grave damage to forests and other property.

Duce Sees Paratroops

Bern, Switzerland, April 15 (AP). Premier Mussolini flew today to a military station in central Italy where he inspected several battalions of parachute troops and watched their manœuvers, Swiss dispatches from Rome reported. After a brief address to the troops Mussolini flew back to Rome.

Would Aid Situation In Indian Ocean, British Declare

By the United Press

London, April 15.—Only a bold, successful blow by the United States fleet in the western Pacific is likely to save the desperate situation on the Indian Ocean, where vital shipping lines are at the mercy of powerful Japanese sea forces, naval experts believed today.

(The Berlin radio quoted the commander of a Japanese naval formation in the Indiar Ocean as asserting that his forces sank 15 British ships within an hour on April 6, and six more, all that remained of a convoy apparently on the way from Calcutta to Ceylon, while they were fleeing to Indian ports. The Tokyo Imperial Headquarters claimed in a communique on April 13 that these 21 ships totaled about 140,000 tons, and that seven others, of about 40,000 tons, were heavily damaged.)

Naval experts did not suggest that the United States should send to the Indian Ocean, far from her bases, major sea units equa' in strength to the Japanese fleet operating there. The blow would have to be struck, they said, somewhere in the western Jacific with the object of compelling Japan to recall at least part of her raiders from the south to cover whatever weakness might be exposed by the American attack.

Prime Minister Churchill revealed in the House of Commons Monday that the enemy has in the Bay of Bengal, off India, at least three battleships, five aircraft carriers, numerous heavy and light cruisers and flotillas of destroyers.

Experts said that these constitute a force that probably is considerably greater than anything the British navy alone can muster in that area.

Thus the only hope, the experts said, is for the American fleet to attack the Japanese in the western Pacific. They believed Japan still is concentrating there the bulk of her battleships to guard communications from the home islands to the war areas in the south, for severance of them would give Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Allied supreme commander in Australia, a chance to begin blasting the Japanese out of New Guinea, Borneo, Java, Sumatra, Singapore and Malaya.

Marine General Switched From Iceland to California

MAJ. GEN. MARSTON | MAJ. GEN. LEJEUNE | COL. JAMES | MAJ. GEN. VANDEGRIFT

Marine Corps headquarters yesterday announced changes in two important commands and the promotion of 18 high-ranking retired officers.

Maj. Gen. John Marston, who recently returned from Iceland, where he had commanded American Marines since last summer, has assumed command of the Second Marine Division at Camp Elliot, San Diego, Calif.

Maj. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift has taken command of the First Marine Division at New River, N. C. He had been on duty there as infantry commander of the division.

Also announced was the transfer of Col. W. C. James, former secretary to the commandant of the Marine Corps, to duty with the First Marine Division.

Among retired Marine officers advanced under a recently approved act of Congress providing for promotion of retired officers who have been specially commended for performance of duty in actual combat was Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, who commanded the Marine Corps from 1920 to 1929.

Gen. Lejeune, who now resides in Norfolk, Va., saw action in the Spanish-American War, the Mexican Expedition of 1916 and the first World War commanded the A. E. F.'s Second Division.

On retirement in 1929, after more than 45 years' service, he served as superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute until 1937, when he was made superintendent emeritus.

Likewise promoted to lieutenant general was Maj. Gen. John T. Myers, of Miami, Fla., who was commanding general of the Department of the Pacific when he retired in 1935. He participated in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, Boxer uprising in China and World War I.

Gen. Marston, new commander of the Second Division, lived in Washington from 1925 to 1929 when he served as assistant to the chief coordinator of the Budget Bureau. Previously he had seen service in Mexico, Nicaragua, Haiti and China.

The First Division's new commander, Maj. Gen. Vandegrift, was assistant to the major general commandant at Marine Corps Headquarters here from 1937 until last November. He had participated in operations in Cuba, Panama, Nicaragua, Mexico, Haiti and China.

Retired officers promoted, in addition to Gens. Lejeune and Myers, are listed with their new ranks:

Laval May Openly Declare French Solidarity With Nazis

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland (Thursday), April 16.—Pierre Laval, vigorous pro-German leader, will serve as "civil supervisor of all France" in a new cabinet to be announced today in Vichy, reliable diplomatic sources said.

There were strong hints that Laval's new regime would openly declare its solidarity with Germany.

Just what powers Laval will have in his new role were not clarified yet, but Fernand de Brinon, Vichy representative in Paris, told German newspapermen that "Laval, not Petain, will determine French policy in the future."

In other words, the aged Petain who has been represented as trying to find some means of avoiding a diplomatic break with the United States, would become a mere figurehead.

Available reports indicated that Admiral Darlan, present vice premier, also would have his powers clipped immensely. The Berlin correspondent of the Bern newspaper Der Bund said Darlan would be designated as Petain's successor, and "entitled to participate" in ministerial councils.

The French war ministry will be abolished, this report said.

There were strong intimations from both Vichy and German-controlled Paris that Laval was charting a course of fuller collaboration with Germany. Laval himself was in Paris yesterday and last night conferring with numerous pro-German associates including Marcel Deat and Jacques Doriot. He planned to return to Vichy this morning.

A Paris radio broadcaster said that the neutral press might believe no important international changes would follow Laval's new accession to power, but actually "only a few hours separate us from a decision." He implied that a communique expected from Vichy tomorrow would deal not only with the Vichy governmental changes but with "changed international relations."

The German radio said among the persons received by Laval was Dr. Alexis Carrel, famous physician and collaborator with Charles A. Lindbergh on mechanical heart experiments.

[A United Press dispatch said Carrel might get the post of secretary of health in the Laval cabinet.]

United States Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy kept close to his quarters in Vichy, maintaining a watchful, noncommittal attitude.

In London a British foreign office commentator said the return of Laval to power had reduced Vichy to the level of "a nickel Balkan State."

Marshal Von Rundstedt Heads Nazis in France

London, Thursday, April 16 (AP).—Field Marshall Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, "the best of German generals," has been appointed to command the Nazi troops in France, the Daily Mail said today.

He was said to be now at Adolf Hitler's headquarters on the Russian front, but leaving immediately for Paris. His appointment was interpreted by the Mail as proof of Hitler's anxiety over a possible Allied invasion of France.

Nazi Forces in France May Go to Russia Now

Kuibyshev, April 15 (U.P.).—Foreign diplomats said today that thousands of German soldiers and a considerable Nazi air force may be released from France for use against the Russians as a result of the Vichy government shake-up, and they feared that eventually Hitler will get the French fleet.

News of Pierre Laval's return to power in France has not been published in Rusia but foreign quarters were informed and their attention was centered on Washington's reaction.

Tawes Confident Tax Goal Reached

Annapolis, Md., April 15 (AP).—State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes was confident tonight that the State income-tax yield would reach the $8,440,000 goal as the dead line for filing returns was reached.

The income-tax force today had cleared 91,333 taxable returns which produced $3,847,717, but it will be two more weeks before all the last-minute returns are tabulated.

Eleven big mail bags containing more than 20,000 returns were delivered at Tawes' office this morning and tomorrow's mail, composed of returns filed just before the midnight dead line, should be even heavier, he said.

Laval Given Hero's Welcome Here in '31

Premier Remembered Well for His 'Black, All-Seeing Eyes"

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Pierre Laval, the swarthy "horse trader from Auvergne," who now is being called Hitler's gauleiter in France, is remembered in Washington for his white ties, his gypsy-like features, and his "black, all-seeing eyes."

He came here in 1931 when he was serving his first term as premier of France. Looking back on the occasion, and remembering Laval's eyes, his sensual lips and his dangling cigarette, one recalls that he was hardly a figure to inspire confidence. Hollywood, in fact, might well have chosen him for some such sinister role as he is now playing in real life as Hitler's man in France.

But no such thoughts as those found expresion in Washington in 1931. Premier Laval was given a hearty welcome, a bedroom in the White House, and all the other honors due a distinguished son of France. At the time, the traditional friendship between France and the United States was much in the public mind, due to the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Yorktown—a battle which was won largely through French aid.

Petain Was Here, Too

Marshal Henri Petain, then 75 and spry, had come over for the celebration. On the day that Laval arrived in Washington—October 22, 1931—Petain was at Union Station to greet him. And so also was Petain's old comrade-in-arms, Gen. John J. Pershing.

Henry L. Stimson, then President Hoover's Secretary of State, now Secretary of War, had gone to New York to meet Laval, and he came down with him on the train.

A reporter described Laval as "a man of less than medium height, swarthy complexion, and almost Oriental features, the most striking of which are his black, all-seeing eyes. His lip is adorned with a black moustache."

The Army Band played the Marseillaise after Laval had walked through a lane of Fort Washington soldiers. Then President Hoover's limousine took the French Premier to the Eighteenth Street home of Walter Edge, American Ambassador to France, where he changed clothes before proceeding to the White House.

At the Edge mansion, after a press conference, Laval gave an autographed statement to The Washington Post. This said in part:

"Through The Washington Post, I wish to express my gratitude for the friendly reception which was accorded me today.

"In your city, which was laid out by one of my compatriots (Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant), I feel thoroughly at home, and I have a sense of living in the atmosphere of old France."

Daughter Big Hit

Premier Laval, out of respect to the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, foreswore all intoxicating liquor while he was in Washington. However, he smoked cigarettes incessantly.

Mlle. Josette Laval, the premier's dark and vivid daughter, who since has become the Countess de Chambrun, made a big hit in Washington. Her first act was to visit a Fourteenth Street florist and buy flowers for Mme. Claudel, wife of the French Ambassador. Later on she cried at a movie, visited the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, and journeyed over to Annapolis to see the midshipmen.

John Jay Daly, then a Post columnist, went overboard for Josette, rhapsodizing as follows:

Josette, Josette,
Within your eyes
I see all France in glory rise.
A fleeting glimpse of Paradise.
Josette.

Premier Laval and President Hoover eventually worked out an agreement that paved the way for a reduction of German reparations and Allied war debts. Editorial writers expressed the hope that the agreement would head off a fellow in Germany named Hitler, who was trying to overthrow the Bruening government.

Laval referred to his visit here as part of a "grand tour." Just before coming here, he had visited Berlin. News dispatches at the time said that while he was there "war-weary, debt-weary Germans gathered outside of the French Embassy in the Pariser Platz, and yelled 'Down with war!'"

'Round the Clock

R. A. F. Blasts Nazi France In Long Raid

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 16.—The R. A. F. carried destruction to enemy strongholds in sweeps over northern France throughout yesterday and the German air force retaliated last night with a heavy raid on a thickly populated district in northeast England which, it was feared, caused heavy casualties.

All emergency raid services were brought into operation as rescue workers recovered at least seven bodies and sought to reach trapped victims of perhaps the heaviest German raid on English soil this year.

The Luftwaffe also aimed at another northeast district but bombs fell only in open spaces. Heavy antiaircraft fire met the raiders.

The round-the-clock R. A. F. raids, in which new bomb-carrying hurricanes, normally fighters, took part followed a heavy Tuesday night bombardment by British heavy bombers of Germany's Ruhr Valley which set huge fires.

Two American Eagle pilots bagged two of the three German planes known to have been shot down during the second successive day of the most sustained aerial campaign of the war. They are flying officers L. A. Skinner, of Webb City, Mo., and R. S. Edner, of Fergus Falls, Minn.

Despite the magnitude of the daylight operations, which extended from Cape Gris Nez to Cherbourg, only three R. A. F. fighter planes were missing.

2½ Million Turn Off Their Lights

Jersey City, N. J., April 15 (U.P.).—Northern New Jersey's industrial belt, rival to Detroit as America"s largest war production area, was dark for 19 minutes tonight in its first blackout test under conditions simulating an air attack.

More than 2,500,000 residents in the 1500-square-mile area darkened their homes at 10 p. m. in the biggest blackout yet staged in Eastern States. The all-clear sounded at 10:19. All of five counties and parts of four others were involved in the gigantic test.

Red Troops Pierce Bryansk Defenses

Odds Too Great

Yanks Fought At Bataan With 2 Planes

By Clark Lee

Melbourne, April 15 (Wide World).—The American Air Force on Bataan usually consisted of one or two combat planes in flyable condition—on good days, that is. Usually there was none.

The most airplanes Gen. Douglas MacArthur ever had at his disposal simultaneously after January 1 were five pursuit ships and one observation plane. But they were lost, one by one.

Officers who left Corregidor on March 15 report that at that time there was one pursuit plane left and that a few days later it was lost, so that in the final overwhelming Japanese drive the American and Filipino forces were without air support.

MacArthur used the air force principally for reconnaissance, ordering the pilots to avoid combat in order to save their planes.

The information they gathered was invaluable in enabling MacArthur to move his slender forces from one sector of the front to another.

At least once, late in January, the air force saved Bataan.

Mechanics made a device whereby two 300-pound bombs could be attached to the wings and released by pulling a wire. Three pursuit ships, thus loaded, took off at night and bombed and strafed enemy landing boats attempting to reinforce infantry parties which had landed on the west coast of Bataan.

Each plane made three trips that night, taking off without runway lights. Several of the pilots had never flown at night before.

Later the mechanics improved the bombing mechanism, extending the racks so the planes could carry 500-pound bombs and dive-bombs without having the projectiles hit their propellers. With these new releasing methods, the pilot devastatingly attacked Japanese shipping in Subic Bay late in February.

First Line Breached, Nazis Speed Aid; Guerillas Harass Foe

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, April 15.—Fighting in the slush of a more definite mass battle-line, the Red army was reported tonight to have achieved a breakthrough in the first lines of the important Bryansk sector of the central front while preparing for the shock of the heralded German spring offensive.

Although authorities made it clear that no decisive battles now were in progress, front dispatches said the Red army force which broke the first defenses of the Bryansk salient—now reputedly under the command of the former Nazi commander in chief, Field Marshal Walter Von Brauchitsch—was approaching the second line in fierce fighting.

The Bryansk Bulge, 200 miles southwest of Moscow, is one of half a dozen major strongpoints which the Germans have held all winter, at grievous cost, with a view to using them for spring offensive bases. In early April, today's dispatches disclosed, Red army units under Gen. Popov killed 3000 Germans in this sector and found new rifles and machineguns obviously brought up for springtime action.

The Germans were bringing up reserves to Bryansk, but even as they did so, Russian guerillas, operating in the deep forests behind the Nazi lines, launched an offensive of their own, wrecking trains, sniping at road transport and attacking airdromes.

(London sources believed the Russians now had firmly established at least one and possibly more bridgeheads over the Lesna River preliminary to severing rail lines and isolating the Bryansk garrison).

Reds Sink 2 Transports

Tonight's communique announced the sinking of two German transports, one of 8000 tons and the other of 9000, in the Barents Sea.

With 1200 Germans reported killed recently on the front northwest of Moscow, hard fighting was contining there, also.

(German reports said dive bombers were assaulting Russian troops and tanks near Lake Ilmen, attacking still usable ice crossings over which the Red Army was moving reserves to it front lines.)

(Stockholm reports said also that the Russian forces of Marshal Timoshenko had made a deep breach in the German lines north of Kharkov and that forward detachments were in the vicinity of Rjepki, a town 15 miles west of the city.)

25,000 Nazis Killed

Moscow, April 15 (AP).—More than 25,000 German officers and men have been killed and more than 200 populated places, including four towns, have been recaptured in a Russian drive on one section of the front west of Moscow in the last four months, the Tass Agency said tonight.

House Naval Group Approves Bill to Build About 150 More Long-Range Submarines

The House Naval Affairs Committee, working at top speed gave unanimous approval yesterday to the Navy's latest proposal to build approximately 150 submarines of the latest long-range type, virtually doubling the Navy's underseas' fleet now in service or under construction.

The action was taken on the Vinson bill after members had heard the testimony of high ranking officers of the Navy in executive session and decided to increase the 170,000 tonnage first recommended to 200,000.

Although Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the committee, said that the type and number of the underseas craft the Navy is preparing to lay down was considered confidential, the tonnage to be authorized would permit the construction of approximately 150 of the type most recently built. The overall cost of the ships was estimated at more than one billion dollars.

The committee also completed hearings in executive session on a measure to authorize expenditure of one billion dollars for additional naval shore facilities, but Vinson said that action on reporting that measure out had been deferred until today.

Axis Planes Bomb Own Desert Unit

Cairo, Egypt, April 15 (AP).—The British Middle East command reported today that a British column which engaged a superior enemy armored force of 30 tanks and self-propelled guns Monday burned out two tanks and damaged five.

The action occurred at Temrad, 12 miles southwest of Gazala and 60 miles from the British defenses at Tobruk. 'We Smacked Hell' Out of Jap On Philippines and sank one large ship and numerous smaller ones,' 'said Davies, who comes from Piedmont, Calif.

"At Cebu we plastered to bits the shipping and the waterfront."

All the attacks, he said, were made in the face of heavy and quite accurate antiaircraft fire through which all the American planes emerged unscathed.

"We hit them first at Cebu quite unexpectedly," said Davies. "We picked out the targets and let them have it. Some of the Japanese were standing on the waterfront, but they scattered in a hurry when the bombs stahted to fall. The attack opened up, but it was too late to hurt us."

Later in the same day they again attacked Cebu and this time sighted a 10,000-ton transport outside the harbor.

May Have Sunk Transport

"One 500-pounder landed just aport the vessel and it swung sharply to the left and began to list. It certainly was damaged heavily and perhaps sunk," Davies said.

The following day, Davies' group attacked Davao. He said the planes dropped full loads on the ships in Davao harbor, sinking a number of small vessels which appeared to be fishing boats but all of which had their guns ablaze.

"I sighted a Japanese seaplane—resembling our warship planes with a long float beneath the fuselage—just taking off," said Davies.

"I called the bombardier over the telephone.

"'Hub,' I said, 'see that baby? I'm going down to give you a crack at him.'

"I put our big ship into a dive. We were doing some 300 miles an hour when we came level with the Jap to let the bomber shoot.

"Our midship guns opened up and I saw pieces of fuselage tearing out of that Rising Sun Jap plane, which was less than 100 feet away. Also what looked like smoke until I realized it was the rear gunner in the two-place Jap plane popping at us. I upped the throttle and told our rear gunner to cut loose. He did, cutting one wing off the enemy ship, which dived out of control.

"I called to the bombardier, 'What's the matter? I didn't hear you shooting at that fellow.'

"He replied, 'Doggone it, colonel, I was so excited at getting a chance at those monkeys that I couldn't get this gun into the right slot.'

"On landing we found the bombardier's hands had been skinned and covered with blood as he had poked his gun from one slot to another in attempting to get proper aim.

"Japs Are Certainly Hot Fliers"

"Meanwhile, two other Japanese seaplanes attacked us from the rear. One of them did an extremely fine bit of acrobatics to get a couple of bursts at us, but fortunately missed.

"Those Japanese certainly are hot fliers and their seaplanes are excellent."

Later the same day the Davies group again attacked Davao, concentrating on enemy troops, which were bombed at low level.

"That was the most satisfactory mission of all," one pilot said, "because we had undergone numerous dive-bombing attacks while we were on Bataan. We knew how our bombing would encourage our own troops and affect the enemy."

The returning fliers disclosed that American and Filipino troops had forced the Japanese to dig in on two sectors south of Davao.

The lines were clearly defined in these areas, the pilots said.

"We zoomed over so low that the concussion of our own bombs shook our ship," one flier said. "We laid our eggs squarely in the Japanese fox holes and trenches."

The B-2 is a "hell of a lot of airplane," the pilots agreed.

They said fellow airmen who bombed Nichols Field in B-17s in broad daylight caught the Japanese by surprise. The enemy did not attempt to intercept as the Flying Fortresses soared over, apparently not noticing they were American planes until the bombs fell.

These planes were intended for bombing of the Japanese lines on Bataan Peninsula, but they arrived too late—after the American-Filipino withdrawal.

Raid Was Good News to Them

tightening of safety measures as a future guard both against subversive activities and accidental hazards.

It reported that careful investigation bore out its conclusion that the fire was not started with wilful or malicious intent but said there was no escape from the conclusion "that the cause and consequences of the fire are directly attributable to carelessness and lack of proper supervision."

"It is not difficult to find acts of carelessness or omission on the part of many individuals connected with the Normandie, but it is difficult to place the sole responsibility upon any one individual," the report said.

In recommending that the Navy take over the merchant marine, the committee also asked that consideration be given "to the stabilizing for the duration of the war of current wage scales and all holders or marine licenses and marine certificates should register with the commandant of the district in which they now reside."

The committee complained of "undue haste, indecision and lack of careful planning" in connection with the conversion of the Normandie. It said the ship was taken over after a hasty examinatfon and it was first planned to convert her into an aircraft carrier. Then it was decided to change her into a boxed plane cargo ship, and then into an Army transport. Finally it was decided that the Navy should use it as a transport. The committee said these changed decisions resulted in delay. Regardless of the need for speed, it said bad judgment was used in attempting to prepare the ship for sailing by February 14, because it was not in condition to sail.

As for the fire, the committee said proper fire-fighting precautions had not been taken, although it has been the fate of almost every comparable sister French liner to be destroyed by fire.

"Not only was no hose ready for immediate use, but at the very moment the fire started even the casual safeguards were absent. There was no fire watch; the abestos shield had been dropped; the metal shield had either fallen over or had been removed. There were no fire extinguishers, nor was there water in buckets in sufficient quantity. Ordinary care, too, would have required that the highly inflammable bales be moved to a safe distance from the scene of operations."

fueled and even took on more bombs at some secret American base in the Philippines.)

Damage Runs High

In all the bombers wrought this damage:

At Davao, on Mindanao Island—An enemy bomber destroyed and several damaged; two enemy transports hit, one probably sunk; one enemy seaplane shot down and two damaged; troop concentrations bombed; docks and warehouses damaged.

At Cebu, on Cebu Island—Three enemy transports sunk and two others hit in addition to several near misses against other vessels; three enemy planes shot down and several damaged aground; docks also damaged.

At Batangas, on Luzon Island—An enemy cargo vessel, believed to have been carrying military supplies, sunk.

Near Manila, on Luzon—Nichols Field, now in enemy hands, several hangars destroyed and runways damaged.

Just a Beginning

Gen. Brett issued a statement making plain that what had been done was only the barest of beginnings and emphasizing the profound importance of the success of Royce's raid over such tremendous distances.

"Gen. Royce," said Gen. Brett, "volunteered and was selected to command this most important mission.

"His accomplishment will undoubtedly be told in detail at a later date, but now it is desired to point out that he has typified the tremendous importance of the air arm.

"He has demonstrated to the highest degree that spirit of offensive action so vital to the winning of any military conflict.

"He took the fight into enemy territory, created dismay and destruction at a time most important to our forces and he has returned.

"The exacting requirements of preparation, under the restrictions and limitations imposed upon our forces by the lack of equipment and maintenance facilities, tremendously increased the difficulties. I cannot too highly emphasize my pride in the work accomplished by the American air forces participating in this mission."

Convicted Robber SaysHeTried toGet 'Father Put in Jail'

Baltimore, April 15 (AP).—A 22-year-old painter, convicted with his father today of participating in a holdup and three attempted holdups, testified that he involved himself "in order to get my father put in jail."

Edwin L. Hayes told the court his father, William, 44, had "threatened to kill my mother." The father recently was released from prison after serving a sentence for bank robbery, and that meanwhile his wife had obtained a divorce and remarried.

The younger Hayes said he "quit my job to get a job with my father so I could watch him all the time. He was doing things I knew he shouldn't do. I planned to get him caught and took him with me when I knew he was in a rage."

Blaze Interrupts Firemen's Session

Williamsburg, Va., April 15 (AP).—Shortly after they had assembled for their monthly meeting, volunteer firemen of Williamsburg were called to answer an alarm at Eastern State Hospital.

An ironing machine was destroyed in a fire in the hospital's laundry building last night. Damage to the building was estimated at about $50. After exhausing their supply of chemicals, the firemen used water from a nearby hydrant to extinguish the blaze.

and a copy of Representative Clare E. Hoffman's "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech, of which Baxter has distributed large quantities.

One of Baxter's pamphlets purported to tell "The Inside Story Behind the War." For his authority, Baxter quoted Prince Kurt Bernhard zur Lippe und Wessenfield, a Luftwaffe officer. Baxter cited reports that his "old friend and schoolmate" has shot down seven British planes. The "inside story," according to Baxter and his friend in the Luftwaffe, is that the war was Britain's fault.

This pamphlet by Baxter was sent through the United States mails by the hidden Soci leaders from Colton, Calif., last week.

Another Baxter pamphlet mailed by the Soci leadership was called "Justice or Chaos. It said, "We do not belong in Europe. The Europeans are tired of absentee British-American landlordism and desire a New Order. Whether Hitler can give it to them is none of our business . . ."

Democracy, said Baxter in a third Soci pamphlet—reprinted from The X-Ray—is unbridled majority rule," and not an American ideal at all but the product of "war hysteria." He says this is a "republic."

Baxter found his most outspoken publicist waiting in the witness room to be questioned before the grand jurors. This was E. J. Garner, editor of the weekly paper, Publicity, of Wichita, Kans.

Asked Peace Move

Garner recently used an eight column headline on his first page to present Baxter's idea that this country ought to arrange a "peace with honor," leaving Europe under the "New Orler" and Asia to Japan, "free of American and British interference."

During the two-day recess called in the grand jury hearing by Foreman John S. Gorrell, Garner and Baxter have been seeing Washington. They called at the offices of Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, whose critical addresses are frequently reprinted in Garner's paper.

CCC Ruins Boys, Governor Asserts

Many Enrollees Found in Prisons, Claims Phillips, of Oklahoma; Blasts NYA Program

By the Associated Press

Red-haired Gov. Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma condemned the Civilian Conservation Corps and National Youth Administration yesterday as "poison to our boys" and declared that "a great majority" of first-term prisoners he had interviewed in his State's Reformatory were former CCC enrollees.

He made an unscheduled appearance before the Senate Labor Committee at the invitation of Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, author of a bill to abolish the CCC and NYA. Waving an unlighted cigar, Phillips asserted that farmers could not get an honest day's work out of a youth who had served in a CCC camp.

Make 3d-Class Citizens

"When a boy can get a job and get paid for half-working," he said, "you won't have anything better than a third-class citizen when you're done.

"Every boy should learn some trade. We want to make taxpaying citizens, not tax-eating citizens."

The Governor added that "I have two former teachers of NYA in the penitentiary now. They go from idleness to drinking."

So roundly did Phillips assail the CCC and NYA that Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, told him he would recommend that the two agencies be discontinued in Oklahoma. Phillips showed no alarm at the prospect. He told Thomas that if he would see that the CCC and NYA funds were diverted to vocational agricultural training, "I'd be the best friend Oklahoma ever had."

In all his visits to Oklahoma penal institutions, Phillips said, he had never found an inmate who had been a member of the vocational agricultural classes or the Future Farmers of America.

Many Become Thieves

"After a term or two in CCC or NYA, the boys have the attitude that after all the Government is going to feed and take care of them, and if they don't find something easy, they go into the car stealing business, which apparently offers the quickest and most lucrative returns," he said.

Thomas called Phillips' statements "startling" and another member of the committee, Senator Rosier (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he hesitated to believe that the juvenile delinquency could be attributed to the training boys received in the CCC or NYA.

The Governor was followed on the witness stand by Robert Handschin, of Washington, who, on behalf of the National Farmers Union, called for continuation of the youth aid program.

"The economy advocates," he said, "seem only to be able to think of economizing at the expense of the low income farmers, the hard-up young people, and the unemployed."

Ben. H. Henthorn, president of the Kansas City (Mo.) College of Commerce, advocated abolishment of NYA. He said it already had spent enough money to pay an army of 2,473,327 men $21 a month for a year.

WPA Also Condemned

Henthorn also broadened his criticism of relief operations to take in the Works Projects Administration as he testified before the Senate Labor Committee on legislation to abolish the NYA and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

"I find no correlation," he said, "between the meticulous energy with which we are urged to save old paper and toothpaste tubes and the prodigious extravagance which has characterized the activities of the NYA and WPA, in many places."

Henthorn declared that private business schools could supply, without subsidy, all the office and clerical help needed by Government and businesses, "if their principal supply of raw material is not bought up by the NYA program of inadequate experience."

He added:

"Tax supported schools can train young people for technical and mechanical work without tuition cost to the student or to the Government, if these young people are not enticed away by the lure of pay for play."

OGR Gets New Quarters Soon

The Office of Government Reports will start moving into its new $600,000 information center at Pennsylvania Avenue and Fourteenth Street Northwest next Monday, going into the parts of the two wings that will be completed by then, it was announced yesterday.

Additional moving will be finished over the weekend of May 1 and the center will open for business on May 4, it was stated.

Approximately 450 persons are to occupy the new structure, but not all of them will be OGR employes. Twenty will be liaison officers from other agencies and a dozen will be staff publicity men assigned from Federal departments weighted with war work.

In addition, there will be Treasury representatives there to sell defense bonds and stamps, employes from the Government Printing Office to handle the sale of GPO publications, and other "tenants," it was said.

The super-information service, designed to answer the needs of everybody who comes to Washington to ask questions, will be open from 8 a. m. until around midnight, officials said yesterday.

Furnishings for the new structure will cost only about $30,000, it was said, although the original rough estimate envisioned an expenditure of maybe $285,000. This sum was cut down to $60,000 on later schedules and then to $30,000 by "making lots of old things do."

Driver's Union Will Penalize Tire Abusers

St. Charles local of the Chauffeurs and Truck Drivers' Union, A. F. L., has voted to penalize any member who subjects tires on government-owned vehicles to unnecessary wear or abuse.

The local has 546 members, most of them now driving government trucks and tractors at the Weldon Springs TNT plant and at a nearby government housing project.

The union's resolution provides that the union will report abuses of tires on government equipment to the contractors, and if the driver involved is fired, "no benefits or protection" will be given him by the union. Also, the executive board of the union may fine the guilty driver.

"My objective when we started was to get all we could and I'm still of that opinion," he said. But on top of previous tax bills, he said in his opinion "seven billion dollars would be climbing the ladder pretty high." Questioned about a sales tax, he said he would prefer not to resort to that, but there was a question whether sufficient revenue could be raised without it.

'Induced' Savings Backed

Later at his office Doughton was asked if either voluntary or compulsory purchase of Government bonds might be sought in lieu of a further increase in the tax program. He said "he had heard some talk about it, but I doubt whether that would come before my committee."

The Price Control Act, the Administration's initial anti-inflation step, was handled by the House and Senate Banking Committees.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, yesterday again expressed his preference for "induced" savings, through offering tax credits as an incentive for bond purchases. But George said he thought it not improbable "that we may have to come to forced loans.

Reports last week that the Administration was considering stepping up the original tax program to more than 12 billion dollars met solid opposition in both House and Senate committees. It was indicated at that time that ranking members of both committees were dubious of reaching the original amount by direct taxation, and merely raising the sights wasn't likely to change that situation. Word was passed on to the Treasury that Congress was more likely to agree to a voluntary or compulsory plan for increasing bond sales than a large new increase in direct tax objectives.

The Ways and Means Committee, driving toward completion of weeks of tax hearings tomorrow, yesterday heard tobacco State witnesses, led by Gov. J. M. Broughton of North Carolina, in opposition to proposed increases in taxes on cigarettes and smoking tobacco.

Might Defeat Purpose

Broughton said the proposed higher levies might defeat the revenue purpose of the increase by reducing consumption of tobacco.

W. M. Robertson, general counsel of Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co., of Louisville, supported the Treasury proposal, and voiced doubt that it would decrease consumption. He indorsed the Treasury's proposed differential between "economy" and standard brand cigarettes. Without the differential in tax, he said manufacturers of "economy" brand cigarettes were "through."

viction.

3. Additional fines of $5000 were imposed on the following company officers: Arthur W. Davis, Alcoa board chairman; Roy A. Hunt, an Alcoa vice president; I. W. Wilson, president of American Magnesium; Willard H. Dow, president, and Earl W. Bennett, vice president of Dow Chemical, and Karl Hochschwender, president of Magnesium Development.

4. The Senate Patents Committee, conducting for the second day a public inquiry into patent policies of the General Electric Corporation, in cartel alliance with the big Krupp munitions manufacturers in Germany, was told that the American firm, by maintaining "absurdly fictitious prices" for steel cutting material produced by the Carboloy Co., a G. E. subsidiary, contributed to the inability of small manufacturers to equip themselves for war production.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, committee chairman, charged that big American corporations, through international trade and patent agreements, constituted themselves a kind of "super government" that "parceled out the world to suit themselves," an "invisible government" that arranged much more effective tariff duties "than any poor Congressman." Bone made the charge after hearing testimony that Carboloy maintained prices for tungsten carbide, superbly hard cutting material, from less than two to more than nine times above German prices.

John Henry Lewin, representing the Justice Department's antitrust division, read for the committee a memorandum written in 1931 by a General Electric engineer stating that G. E. made for its own use "in the last 24 months" more tungsten carbide than was produced by Carboloy, two other American firms and Krupp. The memorandum was one of a long series of documents by which Lewin supported charges that G. E. not only limited production of the material to a few manufacturers, but denied others the right to make it for their own use.

In the same memo, the engineer stated that while production of the material was surrounded with "a great deal of mystery," its manufacture is about as complicated as making a good grade of concrete for a sidewalk."

Lewin charged that Krupp and General Electric officials entertained doubts about the validity of certain tungsten carbide patents pooled as the basis for their cartel agreement in 1928.

Hearing Interrupted

The hearings were dramatically interrupted by an unscheduled witness. He was Walter G. Robbins, president of Carboloy. He strode to the committee table and shouted:

"I arise on a question of personal privilege. My case (antitrust action) comes up for trial in 60 days. I deplore this practice of trying this case before this committee with statements that are absolutely false. I refuse to be called un-American or unpatriotic."

"Please sit down or leave the room," warned Creekmore Fath, committee counsel. Robbins left the room.

In a calmer mood, he received reporters last night in General Electric offices in the Shoreham Building. He said it was not the first time he and his company have been targets of unfounded accuastions "which apparently are designed almost entirely as a mud-slinging campaign."

Robbins denied Lewin's charges of "artificially high prices" by pointing out that the company has made seven price reductions since 1928 while losing more than one million dollars.

Youth Reveals Girl's Slaying

investigation, that the girl had been dead since late afternoon or early evening. The body was found by police at about 10:15 last night.

Lieut. Flaherty said that the girl's underclothes had been ripped off and there were indications that the girl had been criminally attacked.

According to Lieut. Umbaugh, at about 10:15 last night a sportily-dressed youth, identifying himself as Wilhite, entered the First Precinct Station, at 431 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, and asked to speak in private to the lieutenant.

The youth obviously was nervous, Umbaugh said, but on entering the lieutenant's office he refrained from speaking, and sat staring. The lieutenant noticed blood on one of the boy's fingers.

"Are you in trouble?" asked the lieutenant.

"You go up to 1422 N Street and you'll see the trouble," the youth replied.

Unable to get anything more out of the boy, the police officer, accompanied by two detectives and the youth, drove to the apartment house and discovered the girl's body.

During the ride to the apartment, Lieut. Umbaugh said, the youth incoherently mentioned a fight in the apartment and that afterwards he had gone to Alexandria.

Va. Rum Profit Rises $295,494 in Period

Richmond, Va., April 15 (AP).—State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs reported today that the net profit of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board during the last quarter of 1941 was $2,124,375, an increase of $295,494 over the corresponding period of 1940.

The ABC sales during the quarter totaled $7,819,149, an increase of $1,798,855 compared with the same part of the previous year.

Navy May Form Women's Reserve

top age limit was put on the volunteers. The lower age limit was set at 20 after Representative Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri, protested it would be "wrong" to admit girls any younger.

"Twenty is a good healthy age," commented Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia. Age limits set in the WAAC bill, already passed by the House and now before the Senate, are 21 to 55.

While the Navy was pushing the feminine auxiliary idea on Capitol Hill, the War Department announced that it is interested in recruiting women for the Army Signal Corps to help meet an urgent need for engineers and technicians.

A recruiting mision under Col. Fred G. Miller, of the staff of the chief signal officer, will tour the country this month interviewing both men and women skilled in radio engineering and other phases of electronics, amateur and professional.

Maybe in Press Section

Admiral Jacobs told the naval committee that women would prove themselves valuable in communications jobs such as coding and decoding and photographic work. He said, too, that they would be used in laboratory work and in handling confidential secretarial work.

"I foresee that before this war is over we may be using them in many other jobs, and perhaps as cooks in shore establishments," he said.

"And you could use them in the press section, letting some of the men down there off for sea duty," Chairman Vinson said.

Although the bill sets no limit to rank, he said the Navy contemplates a top grade of lieutenant commander for the women.

"And with the same pay as for the men officers, "Representative Maas said, expressing hope the bill will come up in the House next week.

Reed Defends $1 Men's Keeping Ties

Might Not Meet Their 'Commitments,' Truman Group Told

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Philip D. Reed, dollar-a-year chief of the War Production Board's bureau of industry branches and $120,000-a-year chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., defended before Senate investigators yesterday the WPB'S program for converting civilian industries to war work as "a grand and courageous achievement." He predicted that the coming months would see "the terrible impact" of curtailment orders on business, labor and consumer groups.

Reed bluntly told the Truman committee investigating the war effort that "the letters and correspondence you will receive in the weeks ahead and the evidence that will present itself to you on all sides will prove conclusively that American industry is being rapidly and ruthlessly converted to the awful business of war."

He again denounced as inaccurate and false the charges of Robert R. Guthrie, resigned chief of WPB's textile, clothing and leather goods branch, that dollar-a-year men in the WPB had resisted conversion of their industries. As he did before the House Military Affairs Subcommittee on war materials last month, Reed accused Guthrie of being incompetent to handle subordinates, said he was "arrogant and egotistical" and that his branch had become "seriously demoralized."

Opposes Severing Ties

Asked for his opinion on the advisability of having dollar-a-year men divest themselves of their salaries and work at Government pay rates, Reed predicted that "a fairly substantial portion of the younger men might be lost" in that event because they had extensive financial committments which would cause "suffering at home" if discontinued.

Disclosing that he was receiving $60,000 a year from General Electric plus $60,000 a year as "special pay," Reed said it would be hard for some dollar-a-year men "to get off the plateau of commitments." Whereupon Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, remarked that "a lot of people get off very abruptly nowadays," and Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, committee chairman, interposed sharply that "the $21-amonth boys have had to change their standard of living abruptly."

Charles P. Clark, associate counsel for the Truman Committee, led Reed to admit that in contravention of an order by Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, two of the 24 industry branch chiefs were still making decisions affecting their own industries. Reed said that Nelson was aware of this and regarded it only as a "technical violation," which would be corrected soon. The two are D. C. Townson, of the food supply branch, from Curtis & Co., Rochester, N. Y., food processors, and John M. Brower, of the furniture and bedding branch, from a Grand Rapids (Mich.) furniture company.

Tells of Limitation Orders

Reed produced a list of 25 major industry limitation orders issued by WPB since March 16, and said that 23 of these were well under way before Guthrie's departure on March 14. He said 48 curtailment or shutdown orders had been issued in the weeks prior to Guthrie's resignation.

Clark immediately got Reed to admit that only six curtailment orders had been issued between January and March 14 affecting consumers' durable goods industries, the most important of all for war work because of their facilities for handling metal.

Mr. Reed asserted that Guthrie had "hastened to climb aboard the conversion bandwagon and attempted to give the impression that he was the driver."

Today the committee will hear Robert R. Nathan, head of WPB's planning committee, and James S. Knowlson, director of industry operations. Nelson will be called next week.

2 U. S. Ships Destroyed By U-Boats

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., April 15.—Enemy submarines sent torpedoes smashing into two American merchantmen off the Atlantic coast April 9, sinking one and leaving the other broken in half and partly submerged, but 63 of the 66 aboard the vessels were rescued.

The Fifth Naval District, in announcing the attacks today, reported that 35 survivors of one of the ships, a medium sized vessel, were picked up an hour and a half after a single torpedo set her afire and broke her back. They were landed at Morehead City, N. C. Third Mate Lloyd Crampton and Boatswain Harry Ritner, who dived overboard to escape the flames, were listed as missing and presumed lost.

Crampton's home was in North Plainfield, N. J., where his family said he was taking the last trip on a merchantman necessary to qualify him for an ensign's commission in the Naval Reserve.

Twenty-eight survivors of the other torpedoing, which occurred early on the morning of April 9, were rescued from a single lifeboat after being adrift six hours. Fireman Earl Channess, jr., 22, of 1326 Liberty Street, Jacksonville, Fla., who was reported to have jumped overboard when the first of two torpedoes tore into the ship, was missing and believed lost. The vessel described as small, sank after the attack.

Capt. Allan Falkenburg, of Sunnyside, Long Island, N. Y., told Navy public relations officers that his medium-sized ship was torpedoed without warning, on the starboard side just aft of amidship. Fire broke out immediately and he escaped through the wheelhouse and gave orders to abandon the ship at once.

2 North American Tankers Sunk Off Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, April 15 (AP).—A German submarine torpedoed and sank two North American tankers and one British freighter off the Brizilian coast in the last week, the government announced tonight.

The sinkings occurred off the coast of Ceara, northern Brazilian state.

The official announcement, made by the Brazilian press and propaganda department, said that 63 of the victims were brought by plane and land to Natal.

Navy Relief Drive Quota May Be Passed

A prediction that the drive to raise $75,000 here for Navy relief would exceed its quota by at least $10,000 came from Campaign Chairman George A. Garrett yesterday after receiving a $5000 contribution from the United Mine Workers of America.

Late tabulations disclosed slightly more than $50,000 had been raised through personal and group solicitations, with the Government group's campaign for $35,000 scheduled to continue until April 30. The Government group to date has been credited with obtaining $2300.

"We are going to try to double our quota through solicitations and through our portion of the receipts derived from the Army-Navy Relief Caravan at the Capitol Theater on April 30 and the Navy Relief Society's boxing carnival at Griffith Stadium on May 21," Garrett said.

Garrett received the U. M. W. contribution from the union's secretary-treasurer, Thomas Kennedy, at Kennedy's office. It was the biggest donation of the drive, the personal solicitation phase of which ended last weekend.

No Retirement Age For Army Gloves?

Canton, Ohio (AP).—Herman Klehammer is ready to lay aside until another winter the muskrat fur gloves he has been wearing for 40 years. He bought the gloves and a fur cap to match for $1 from one of the soldiers in the detachment sent here to guard the grave of President McKinley in 1902.

"He threw in a side of bacon with the gloves and cap," Klehammer recalls. The soldier previously had served in Alaska where fur gloves and caps were standard equipment.

Court Dismisses West Executive Av. Parking Case

The long drawn out case concerning the availability of West Executive Avenue near the White House for general parking was dismissed by Judge Hobart Newman in Police Court yesterday on grounds that the question was moot since the area is now blocked off anyway and under guard by troops for the duration of the war.

The controversy, which necessitated counsel to check plats and street records dating back of 1791, had its beginning August 30, 1941, when three men were given traffic tickets for parking "in an area set aside for cars with official parking permits only."

The defendants, all State Department clerks, contended that there was discrimination in issuing parking permits in an area that was a general thoroughfare open to everyone.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Friday from the home, conducted by the Rev. W. H. Gray.

Illinois Vote Shows Republican Gains Despite Lack of Interest Displayed in Primaries

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GOVERNOR CONGRATULATES BROOKS—Both wearing broad smiles, Gov. Dwight H. Green (right) congratulates Senator C. Wayland Brooks after the latter's renomination was assured in the Illinois Republican primary. Mrs. Brooks was just as pleased as her husband, who won in a landslide over Warren Wright, Illinois State treasurer

By William J. Conway
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago, April 15.—Republican gains and a decline in public participation in war-time politics shared interest tonight in the wake of the Illinois primary election.

Projection of unofficial returns from yesterday's vote—the first major State-wide test of 1942 and the first since the attack at Pearl Harbor—indicated a total of approximately 1,850,000. That would be the lowest in 12 years in Illinois.

GOP Gains in Chicago

A similar projection placed the Democratic total in the Senatorial contest at 913,360 or about 52 per cent of the total in that race compared with 1,307,267 or 55 per cent in 1940. By the same method the Republican total in the senatorial contest was figured at 856,971 or about 48 per cent of the total compared with 1,038,172 or 45 per cent in 1940.

Estimations based on the Chicago vote alone were that the number of Democratic ballots had dropped to 668,798 this year from 933,596 in the primary of 1938, while the number of Republican ballots in the city was calculated at 244,154 this year against only 192,097 in 1938. Downstate, the Republican ratio of vote-pulling superiority was better than two to one.

Candidates backed by the regular party organizations—with few exceptions—won with ease. Senator C. Wayland Brooks, prewar isolationist now committed to support of all-out warfare, breezed to renomination by the Republicans.

Kelly's Men Win

Stephen A. Day, erstwhile isolationist who did not have the aid of some Republican elements, made a successful bid for renomination for Congressman-at-large in a triumph over Denison B. Hull, former chairman of the Chicago Chapter of the Fight for Freedom Committee.

Entrants indorsed by the Kelly-Nash Democratic organization in Chicago emerged victorious without trouble. They were headed by Representative Raymond S. McKeough, a strong Roosevelt supporter, who coasted to the party's Senatorial nomination and thus will oppose Brooks next fall.

Incumbent Congressmen who sought renomination—with two exceptions—likewise met with success. Tenth District Representative George A. Paddock, of Evanston, who ran with Republican organization blessing, was defeated by former Representative Ralph E. Church. Democratic Representative Leo Kocialkowski, of the Eighth District in Chicago, lost to City Treasurer Thomas S. Gordon, who was favored by the Kelly-Nash adherents.

Day will be opposed in the autumn election for the single Illinois Congress-at-large seat by Benjamin S. Adamowski, who compiled a huge vote in winning the Democratic nomination.

Action Is Due Today on D. C. Recreation Bill

The House District Committee is expected to agree today to Senate amendments to the District recreation bill for a new local recreation board of seven members.

Three other measures are scheduled for consideration when the committee convenes at 10 a. m.

The recreation board bill, as passed originally in the House and agreed to in the Senate after revisions, authorizes the Commissioners to appoint a seven-member board composed of a representative of the Board of Education, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Commissioners, and four private citizens.

Action is expected also on a bill sponsored by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, which would strike out a provision of the District income tax law requiring out-of-town manufacturers to pay a 5 per cent tax on their net profits in the District and a $10 salesman's license fee annually.

Two measures sponsored by Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, will be taken up at the same time. One would permit the operation of rooming and boarding houses in local areas now zoned as residential "A" restricted and "A" semirestricted, provided the houses conform to present fire safety regulations.

The other bill would permit persons arrested for drunken driving in the District to submit themselves to scientific tests in order to determine whether they are intoxicated. The measure does not specify what kind of test may be taken.

Representative Randolph said last night the committee also may consider a bill changing the names of some streets in Washington to the names of South American countries.

Child Welfare Work Stressed By Archbishop

The wartime value of child welfare enterprises was stressed Tuesday night by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, addressing the annual meeting of the Christ Child Society at the Washington Club.

Archbishop Curley said the war "should not allow us to lose sight of domestic problems, which have been increased by war tension," and declared that proper care of children today would insure a morally, physically and spiritually strong postwar generation.

He said there was one experience that would always stick with him—that of living years ago in a community where a 16-year-old boy was hanged, his career the result of a bad sociological background.

The annual society report revealed, among other things, that 317 girls and 544 boys attended the Christ Child Settlement House at 608 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, in 1941.

A total of 11,924 days of care were given convalescent children at Christ Child Farm near Rockville, Md., where 117 children were cared for during the year.

Ford Develops Tire Using 1-16 As Much Rubber

Detroit, April 15 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co., it was learned today, has developed an automobile tire using only a fraction of the amount of rubber needed for the conventional tire.

Ford engineers who have been experimenting with the new tire since the rubber shortage forced rationing of all stocks of standard tires, have developed a process for treating the fabric and using not more than one-sixteenth the amount of rubber heretofore used in tire manufacturing.

Company officials are withholding formal announcement of the new development pending further tests, although trials under operating conditions are said to have shown the tire to be capable of withstanding great wear.

MacArthur's Command Is Confirmed

New Zealand is included in MacArthur's command.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early, however, said shortly after the two spoke that Mr. Roosevelt would not have a statement for the press on the matter last night.

"The President said all he had to say yesterday," he told reporters, "There is complete unity in Australia and that was amply demonstrated by what was done in the Philippines today."

He referred to the successful air raids made from Australia on Japanese positions in the islands.

Earlier in the day, official quarters said that while Gen. MacArthur was in supreme command of the United Nations land, naval and air forces in the Southwest Pacific—as declared by President Roosevelt Tuesday—his authority had never been formally accepted by the Netherlands and New Zealand governments.

At his press conference Tuesday, the President declined to define the extent of the Southwest Pacific command. Asked if it included New Zealand, he said that the question of where the area of a command began or ended often was a problem. Also, he added, it was a good idea to keep the enemy guessing.

Early Doubts Confusion

This, however, was followed by yesterday's dispatches quoting a spokesman for MacArthur as saying the general's command was limited and that the only "real change" in Australia had been his transfer from the Philippines.

Secretary Early, asked about these statements, reiterated President Roosevelt's words of the day before and said he doubted there was any confusion about the matter.

"He (MacArthur) has complete communications with the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff," Early added. "Whatever doubts there may be he could have clarified very quickly and they would be clarified by the appropriate officials, not by me to you."

Early declared that the War Department was the place for reporters to ask their questions. There, Army officials indicated that a statement might be issued shortly outlining the command setup in the Pacific.

In Canberra, Prime Minister Curtin of Australia said his government considered MacArthur in supreme command of the United Nations force in the Southwest Pacific with full power.

Despite the statement in official quarters here that the Netherlands and New Zealand governments had not formally accepted MacArthur's authority, a Dutch spokesman in London said his nation's armed forces in the area were at the American general's disposal.

Japs Launch New Burma Offensive

the worn British army in the Irrawaddy Valley was throwing its limited reserves into a fierce battle on the threshold of the oil fields, and while other Chinese troops were slowly retreating up the Sittang, toward Mandalay.

Fresh reinforcements were being thrown steadily into the new Salween offensive and Japanese aircraft were active in force.

The Chinese government announced in Chungking that the American volunteer group fliers of the Chinese air force had successfully attacked Japanese positions in the forward area of the Burma front Tuesday morning.

Jap Unit Wiped Out

A detachment of Chinese troops, it was announced, wiped out a Japanese unit in a surprise raid 3 miles west of the Swa River on the front north of Toungoo, far up the Sittang River.

The communique announcing today's new Japanese offensive in the east said that the invaders also were striking vigorously on the Swa front, but it was said that the Chinese were resisting firmly and maintaining their positions even though they were outnumbered and were receiving but little air or artillery support.

Moslem Convicted As Violator of Draft Statutes

John W. Miller, 26, who testified that he failed to fill out and return his selective service questionnaire because of his Moslem religious beliefs, was convicted of violating the draft law by a District court jury yesterday.

The jury of nine women and three men returned their verdict after deliberating only about 15 minutes.

Defense counsel said that a motion for a new trial will be filed shortly. Should this be denied, Miller will be liable to a prison term not exceeding five years, or a fine not exceeding $10,000, or both.

Miller declared that his membership in a local Negro Moslem sect forbade him take an oath, citing this as his reason for not completing the questionnaire. Prosecutor John C. Conliff pointed out, however, that Miller took the customary court oath, with one hand on the Bible, when he mounted the witness stand to testify in his own defense.

In answer to his contentions that he had religious scruples against war as a result of his faith, Conliff asserted that the law provided regular methods for the classification of conscientious objectors.

He added, however: "I don't believe this man is sincere as a Moselm."

Jew-Baiting Held Key Policy Of Gerald Winrod's 'Defender'

(Editor's note—Scores of verminous little sheets, each with a few thousand readers, are gnawing away at the faith and unity of our people, whispering defeat and clamoring about "freedom of the press." Their common policy—"made in Germany"— is to turn Americans against one another, and to split America from the United Nations. This is the eighth article of a series about these papers.)

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Gerald B. Winrod, who was called here last week to be questioned by the special grand jury on Axis agents, issues a magazine called The Defender, in Wichita, Kans.

At the grand jury chambers, Winrod found himself at home in the company of the editors of America in Danger and Publicity, with whom his publication has maintained cozy professional relations.

They regularly pick up material from The Defender, as do The Beacon Light, The X-Ray, The Broom and dozens of others of the vermin press.

Jew-baiting has long been one of Winrod's key policies, and he found that it fitted smoothly into the pro-Nazi line he has followed for a decade—and with real vigor since he visited Germany a few years ago.

One of the frequent contributors to the Defender has been Jacob Thorkelson, former Representative from Montana, whose franks were used by the Viereck Nazi propaganda machine.

It was Thorkelson who professed to expose, in the Defender, a "plot" by which England was going to draw the United States back into the empire.

Along these lines, Winrod fought every proposal that contemplated any step that would embarass Hitler's efforts to force his "new order" upon Europe.

Since America entered the war, Winrod has toned down his general propaganda, and gone back to hammering away at his anti-Jewish policy with a vigor worthy of Der Angrieff.

Last week he announced that he would run for the Senate, although he was branded a pro-Nazi and defeated in 1938. The issue this time, he stated, is that an internatonal conspracy caused the war and is trying to seize the Government.

He claims the Defender has 100,000 readers. They receive the magazin through the United States mails.

Berlin Radio Version Of Coughlin Situation

London, April 15 (U.P.).—The Berlin radio in an English-language broadcast tonight charged President Roosevelt with trying to "get rid of Rev. Charles E. Coughlin by gangster methods so popular in the United States."

The reason for the effort, the Germans said, was that Coughlin "attempted to enlighten the people of the United States with regard to the President's Jewish and Bolshevik connections.'

"It is easy to understand," the broadcast said, "that Coughlin thus cannot expect to be in Roosevelt's good book and that Roosevelt is eager to get rid of him."

Stay in Union, WLB Orders

board order has been incorporated in contracts between the company and the unions.

The unions had demanded a general pay increase of 12½ cents an hour. The board granted 4½ cents increase and provided that the wage question could be reopened in six months from last January 15, the effective date of the pay boost. Average wages ranged from 75.4 cents an hour in the lowest paid plant to $1.075 in the highest paid, the board said.

An increase of 4½ cents an hour in the starting wages also was ordered, and a provision was made to pay union representatives normal wages for time spent in adjusting grievances.

This was the second instance in a week in which the board granted union maintenance where a union shop had been asked. Morse observed, however, that "it does not follow that this plan will establish any precedent to be applied generally in other cases."

Man Accused of Aiding Reich With Tin Foil

New York, April 15 (INS).—A 40-year-old naturalized American of German ancestry faced loss of his citizenship and a possible 10-year prison term tonight because, the Government charged, he saved empty toothpaste tubes, tin foil and the like—for the Nazis.

The accused man, Carl Franz Theodor Fuchs, a spice salesman, was alleged in a Federal presentment with having attempted to ship a large box full of the empty containers to Germany by way of Japan. The package was labeled "books," the Government charged, but was intercepted by customs officials.

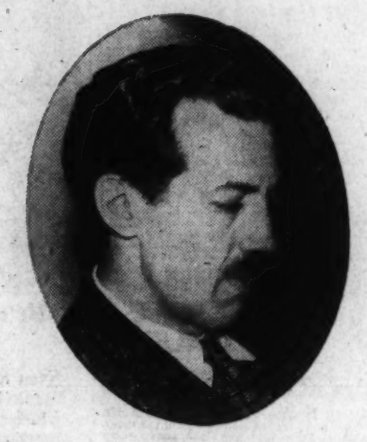
"GO TO WASHINGTON? ... I'LL QUIT FIRST!"



With that parting shot, an ambitious young New York reporter turned down a chance to cover the President of the United States! Before his editor revived, reporter Ernest K. Lindley was employed by another paper to cover the one person he thought more important than the President. And never did a reporter display greater foresight.

Foresight? Almost clairvoyance. Where other men, in '29, saw only the Governor of a State, Lindley's political acumen showed him a man destined to occupy the White House. Close contact gave Lindley a pre-view of the shape of things to come. And when Governor Roosevelt became President Roosevelt, Lindley became a Washington correspondent of premier importance.

For then, Lindley made all Washington his field. Today, with the country at war, he is the Capital's key newsman—rated by his colleagues as the best informed newsman in Washington... news capital of the world.

Lindley knows innumerable important personalities intimately. They include every shade of political belief, but they all welcome Lindley. They know that he writes with malice towards none and accuracy for all. He has their confidence. That's why, for the past three years, Ernest K. Lindley has been the Chief of the vitally important Washington Bureau of NEWSWEEK.

To Lindley's friendly ear comes a wealth of first hand information, giving his signed articles and the Bureau's many dispatches in each issue of NEWSWEEK a special value. News from the whirlpool of national and international events becomes crystal clear through his analytical and authoritative pen. And that is typical of NEWSWEEK's entire corps of crack editors. Men of action—associates of men of action—they write from inside experience in their respective fields of War, Government, Labor, Sports, Entertainment. They put you in the know. For they give you not only the news—complete and unbiased—but also its inner meaning...its significance.

News plus News Significance is but one of NEWSWEEK's original contributions to modern newsweekly journalism. Another is Signed Opinion. And still another is Periscope, the special department that has a record of 88% accuracy in forecasting events to come.

This triple focus on important news events—an exclusive NEWSWEEK technique—has proved so valuable that more than 500,000 intelligent American families now turn to NEWSWEEK every week to keep intelligence razor-keen.

Edited by men of action—not by arm chair theorists—NEWSWEEK is vital reading. For clarity of judgment in these trying times—know the meaning of the news! Get your copy of NEWSWEEK at any newsstand today!

Central Control System Weak In Blackout

Final judgment on the success of the District's first total blackout will not be reached until next week, when reports from zone and sector wardens and chiefs of services will be analyzed, defense officials announced.

Until that time, no serious consideration will be given to planning another blackout, it was said—although one defense official stated that he "wouldn't be surprised" if the next one occurred before the first of May.

Observation to date indicate that the weakest point in the test seemed to have been the central control communications system. Civilian Defense Director Lemuel Bolles is today inspecting the Baltimore central control, after visiting the one at Edgewood Arsenal yesterday.

Watchers from a Bolling Field bomber that cruised over Arlington County and the southwest tip of the District saw the lights of Alexandria blazing minutes after those of Washington had faded into almost complete darkness.

"Cascade" System Bogs Down

The same observers, who were circling about a house outside of Alexandria where new blackout blinds were being tested, noticed that cars cut off lights and houses were darkened more promptly than street lights, suggesting that civilians acting on the siren signals were more successful than officials depending on notice from the control centers.

Washington's model air warden post, the Lincoln Park area headquarters at Kingman School, reported that the "cascade" system of communications fell down almost completely.

Developments from Tuesday's test included almost perfect results from the test of light insulating Venetian blinds and auto headlights at the home of W. Harold Otley in Alexandria and a possible solution of the District's difficulty in obtaining compressors for air horns.

Filters on Headlights

The blackout blinds were developed by C. H. West, a Miami, Fla., blackout consultant. West's automobile headlights use a series of colored filters and baffles which direct the light beam in a line so nearly parallel too the ground that although it suffices for the driver and approaching cars, it is not seen from the air because it strikes nothing to make the light visible.

The District, which originally planned to have its entire warning system composed of powerful airhorns instead of the barely adequate sirens now used, has not been able to get compressors for the 21 horns ordered. West explained to civilian defense officials that compressors could be made from materials at hand.

McNutt Agency Gets Physical Fitness Unit

The much talked-about Division of Physical Fitness—through which the dancer, Mayris Chaney, did her bit for civilian defense—is no more.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, into whose lap the division was dropped on April Fool's Day, yesterday announced its absorption by the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services and the Office of Education.

Before absorbing the division, he trimmed the number of its employes down to ten. Among the ten, however, is John B. Kelly, political boss who started the division's "Hale America" program and has directed its activities.

Title But No Pay

Kelly recently threatened to resign unless the division was given $300,000 a year, maintaining its work would be crippled beyond recognition if the Budget Bureau cut it much under this.

He will serve without compensation, but will have the title of Assistant Director of the ODHWS and be permitted to keep his office in Philadelphia. His office staff has been cut to two secretaries.

The Budget Bureau allowed Administrator McNutt $9000 with which to cover cost of taking on the division during this quarter. Spokesmen in his office said this was all he asked and pointed out the entire 77-man recreation board of ODHWS has operated for a year on $300,000.

McNutt Commends Division

At the Philadelphia office up to now Kelly has had 36 employes. In addition, there have been two or three liaison officers assigned to the national Office of Civilian Defense and a whole big field of coordinators operating throughout the country to promote bowling, ping pong, horseshoe pitching, walking, and nearly every other sports activity.

In his statement announcing discontinuance of the division, Administrator McNutt commended the stimulus furnished by it to local and individual initiative in organizing constructive use of leisure time and declared it "has aided communities throughout the Nation in planning and developing local fitness programs."

"This program will be forwarded through the existing facilities of ODHWS and the Office of Education, both part of the FSA," he said. "Field recreation representatives of ODHWS will assist local communities in developing plans to meet their recreational needs, while representatives in the Office of Education will do similar work with schools and colleges."

Victory Sidelights

McCarran Pledges D. C. All Possible Protection in Raids

A pledge that Washington will have all the protection possible in the event of an attack was made last night by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, at a mass meeting of air-raid wardens in Woodrow Wilson High School.

The chairman of the Senate District Committee said, "The example of discipline Washington residents displayed during the blackout was the best I have ever seen."

Commissioner John Russell Young said:

"All of us are mighty proud of the manner in which you responded," he said. "We are now getting prepared to meet any trouble when and if it comes. It was typical of all the people of America."

Among the 400 persons present were Commissioners Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz.

Joint Meeting Set At Dunbar High

A joint meeting of the East Central Civic Association, the Civilian Defense Committee and the air-raid wardens staff and workers will be held at Dunbar High School, First and N Streets Northwest tonight at 8.

Soldiers' Presence During Test Explained

The unusual number of soldiers lounging downtown before the blackout Tuesday was explained by a policeman: during blackout tests, soldiers in nearby towns are routed from their barracks and marched into the woods for the duration. "Consequently, all of them try to get liberty on nights when blackouts are scheduled," the officer said.

Raid Wardens To Meet Deputy

Zone Six Warden E. M. O'Sullivan, Dupont Circle area, has requested the air raid warden volunteers to report to the Ross School, R Street near Seventeenth, tonight at 8 to meet the new assistant deputy, George Cox, and to hear an address by a British army officer.

Miss Ruth Parmele will be on duty at 1720 Sixteenth Street Northwest today to accept registrations for the advance Red Cross course.

Junior Trade Board To Hear Rosenwald

With every effort concentrated on organizing and publicizing "Clean-Up For Victory Week," which will be held from April 26 to May 2, the Junior Board of Commerce will fire its next shot in this campaign at its luncheon meeting at 12:30 today in the Annapolis Hotel. Lessing J. Rosenwald, chief of the Bureau of Industrial Conservation, War Production Board, will speak.

Public Urged To Get Coal Now

Warning that the war may impose severe strictures on the transportation of coal by rail before the year is out, George M. Roberts, superintendent of the Department of Weights, Measures and Markets yesterday advised District residents to lay in their next winter's supply of coal "as early as possible."

Roberts pointed out that the Government may deem it necessary to ban the hauling of certain commodities by rail in favor of war materials and supplies, and that coal may be among the included items.

"The wise consumer will therefore purchase and lay in his supply of coal during the spring and summer while production is reasonably good and delivery facilities are fairly adequate." Roberts said.

He stressed also that anthracite in domestic sizes has dropped about 50 cents a ton in the last month, and predicted a further drop this month, which he regarded as the best time to buy.

Home Nursing Class Opened

A new home nursing class is open for the residents of the Brightwood area, the District Red Cross announced yesterday. Classes will be held Mondays and Fridays from 8 p. m. to 10 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Charles O'Connor, 902 Jefferson Street Northwest. Mrs. Dorothy Vane, R. N., will instruct the group. Registrations may be made by telephoning Mrs. O'Connor at Georgia 6938.

Discouraged Nazis Pray for the Sea To Engulf Malta

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cairo, April 15.—Some German airmen, despairing over their scant achievements in the repeated bombings of Malta, have come to the belief that the only way to rid themselves of the British Mediterranean island fortress would be to sink it, Sir Walter Monckton, acting minister for state in the Middle East, told correspondents here today.

Just returned from an inspection of Malta in which he was accompanied by Air Marshal Arthur William Tedder, commander in chief of the Royal Air Force in the Middle East, Monckton said he had interviewed a German pilot who had been shot down over the island. He quoted the German as saying:

"The only way to get Malta down would be to sink it. We thought we had air superiority over Malta, but it doesn't seem to do any good. Malta is one aircraft carrier that the Luftwaffe will never be able to send to the bottom of the sea."

Hermit, Lacking $25,000 Bail, Held As Draft Dodger

Boston, April 15 (U.P.).—Draft Defier Gregory Carhart tonight pondered the "imperialistic" war in East Cambridge Jail, where he is held in $25,000 bail on a charge of failing to appear for induction into the Army.

The 29-year-old Chesterfield hermit will be given a hearing next Wednesday after pleading innocent before a United States commissioner today.

Carhart, former Lehigh University student, was seized by FBI agents yesterday at hs cabn fortress where he had threatened to "shoot it out" with anyone who tried to force him into the Army. U. S. Commissioner William C. Rogers set the high bail at the request of Assistant United States Attorney Thomas P. O'Connor.

Dormitories Will Be Neat But Not Flossy

Dormitories being designed for Washington's Government girls will be neither Spartan nor flossy, National Housing Agency officials said yesterday, but "quite attractive and comfortable."

Although refusing to divulge before architect's drawings are ready, which probably will be sometime next week, the officials declared the dormitory structures will provide privacy. "Probably not as much as every girl would like," they said, "but sufficient to please most of them."

Approximately 1300 employes from various housing agencies coordinated under Administrator John Blandford will be moved into the Longfellow Building by the end of April, according to present plans. This will put all employes of the coordinated agency into three buildings, approximately 50 still being in the old Dupont Circle Apartments and the staff for this region remaining in temporary building No. 2.

A special field office to handle Washington housing is being contemplated, officials said, to cope with the enormous Washington problem.

Coordinated into the NHA all over the country to date are approximately 5700 employes, with a few others yet due for absorption. Housing units from the Public Buildings Administration and the Federal Works Agency and the United States Housing Authority have been absorbed, and some workers from the housing division of the Farm Security Administration.

As the new agency works to keep up with needed war building, it foresees the day when tents will have to be utilized in some areas. "But possibly not in Washington," officials said. Trailers already are being utilized officially in some sections.

George H. O'Connor, popular after-dinner ballad singer, was appointed to the District Unemployment Compensation Board by the Commissioners yesterday. He will fill the unexpired term of the late Daniel J. Callahan.

O'Connor will serve until August 30, 1944 as employers' representative on the five-man board. A native of Washington, O'Connor, 65, lives at 3313 Cleveland Avenue Northwest.

Maybe your chances of buying a new car are better than you think

Here's clarifying information about the rules on the purchase of new automobiles—and how you can get one if you are eligible.

MORE people are entitled to buy new automobiles under Government rationing regulations than may have been generally realized.

Indeed, if you are eligible to buy a new car, and continue to drive an old and inefficient model, you may actually burn up more gasoline, consume more oil and wear out tires faster than is desirable in the interest of conservation of critical materials and supplies.

The principal groups eligible for the purchase of new cars are as follows:

1. Physicians, surgeons, visiting nurses, veterinarians and regularly practicing ministers of a religious faith, when their cars are used for professional purposes.
2. Persons engaged in fire-fighting services, police services, public health services, mail services or highway construction and maintenance of equipment when cars are used in direct line of duty.
3. Persons furnishing transportation to the public, when the purchase is required in the interest of public safety and convenience.
4. Persons engaged in the prosecution of the war, directly or indirectly, including executives, engineers, technicians and workers. Such cars must be used in transportation to or from or within factories, power plants, transportation or communication facilities, farms, lumber camps, mines, military or naval establishments, when the work done in such place of employment is essential, directly or indirectly, to the prosecution of the war.
5. Persons transporting produce and supplies to and from a farm when applicant does not own or possess a truck or other practicable means of transportation.
6. Traveling salesmen, when the car is required in selling foods and medical supplies or machinery and equipment to farms, factories, mines, oil wells, lumber camps or similar productive establishments.
7. Persons delivering newspapers, when the car is required for wholesale delivery.

The first step in getting a car is to fill out the proper application form, which we will be glad to obtain for you.

It is then necessary only to demonstrate to the local rationing board that your need for a car is bona fide to get a "certificate of purchase" entitling you to immediate delivery on the model of your own selection.

If you have any questions about your eligibility after reading the above list, we will be glad to answer them for you to the best of our ability.

If you're eligible...let us help you

This is an honor not lightly bestowed, and one to be cherished by you and your associates.

As the Secretary of the Navy, and as a fellow American, I congratulate you upon the achievement of this honor. And in so doing, let me remind you that your company's contribution, together with that of other of our patriotic countrymen, is only the beginning! This production, increased manyfold, must and will become the tide of victory!

Thanks, Mr. Secretary! We Accept the

NAVY "E" AWARD for Excellence

. . . and We Rededicate Our Entire Resources to the Service of America

On Friday, April 10, the Secretary of the Navy informed the Broderick & Bascom Rope Co. of its selection to receive the coveted Navy "E" Award. This honor, symbolized by the Navy "E" burgee—a pennant bearing the anchor and "E"—is official recognition of outstanding performance in production.

To Navy men and their ships, since 1906, the letter "E" has literally stood for "Excellence" in a task assigned; winning it has been a much-sought mark of distinction. Now bestowed upon industry for special achievement in serving the Navy, the "E" is properly shared by the plant and all its employees. The new Navy "E" burgee will fly near our American Flag, and individual employees will be entitled to wear "E" lapel buttons.

In accepting this award, with deepest thanks, the Broderick & Bascom Rope Co. appreciates that it carries the obligation to surpass past records today and in the future. Through times of peace and war, since 1876, we have given our best to the manufacture of wire rope for the nation and its industries. At this new milestone we again dedicate our full energies and resources to the cause for which America fights and the Victory that will be won.

2 Marines Die, 4 Are Hurt in Va. Auto Crash

Two marines were killed and four others injurde early yesterday when their car crashed into a trailer truck near Woodbridge, Va., while they were driving to their base at Quantico, Va.

Killed were: Private Donald C. Kime, 24, and Private Lee Courtney, 23, both of Philadelphia. State police reported that Courtney was driver of the car.

Taken to the hospital at Quantico for treatment were: Private Roby Ball, jr., 19, of Baxter, W. Va., Corp. Edwin Kaplan, 27, of New York, Corp. Emmett Chasteen, 23, of Birmingham, Ala., Private Phillip K. Mackert, 23, of Philadelphia.

State police said the car, southbound, apparently went out of control after striking a grass traffic "island" on U. S. Highway No. 1 and then hurtled into northbound traffic, crashing into the truck.

A coroner's jury acquitted John L. Sullivan, 50, of Alpena, Mich., yesterday after an inquest into one of last year's traffic fatalities which was postponed pending the recovery of a principal witness.

The hearing was into the death of Christ Tsepouros, 60, of 1304 Queen Street Northeast, who was struck and killed at Seventh and I Streets Northwest, October 19.

It was testified he and a companion, Makis N. Katsourous, 52, of 1136 Seventh Street Northwest, were so engrossed in conversation that they walked into the street into the path of Sullivan's automobile. Katsourous suffered a fractured leg and only recently was discharged from Gallinger Hospital.

Rotary Head Urges Americans To Know Their Latin Neighbors

ROTARIANS' GUESTS—At yesterday's Pan American luncheon staged by the Rotary Club were (from left) Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, Ambassador from Mexico; Algernon P. Reeves, president of the Washington Rotary Club, and Tom J. Davis, president of the Rotary International

"Disinterest of Americans in learning the South American way and language is remarkable, and will have to be overcome if Pan-American solidarity is to be maintained and strengthened," Tom J. Davis, International Rotary president, said yesterday at a Pan-American luncheon of the local club in the Willard Hotel.

Recently returned from a six-week tour of South and Central America, Davis spoke before ambassadors and ministers of 17 Latin-American republics and about 375 Rotary Club members.

In pointing out the necessity for reciprocity of culture and language, Davis declared that lack of understanding on the part of visiting North Americans and the Latin-Americans' trust and faith in our policies. Germans and Italians, he reported, were better and more active participants in South American community life than the majority of North Americans living there.

Davis also stated that "fly-by-night" articles written by North Americans visiting the countries south of the Rio Grande were looked upon as inaccurate and harmful by the leaders and people down there.

"The American people have a great deal to learn from our Latin American friends, and it is time the people here recognized the vital importance resources of those Americas will play in our war program," he stated.

"These two continents are the world's strongholds of democracy in this time of chaos and conflict and it is our duty to work with harmony if our present idealism is to remain," he concluded.

Diplomatic representatives of Mexico, Ecuador, Venezuela, Colombia, Chile, Cuba, Panama, Bolivia, Paraguay, Guatemala, El Salavador, Nicaragua, Honduras, Costa Rica, Haiti, Dominican Republic and Argentina were present. Also attending were Representative Sol Bloom, House Committee of Foreign Affairs; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general, Pan American Union; Philip W. Bonsal, State Department; William R. Vallance, State Department, and Jaime E. Alfaro, the Mexican Ambasador's son.

10c Callbox Charge Asked By Cab Drivers

A 10-cent service charge for taxicab callbox service was requested by the District Cab Owners' Association yesterday at the Public Utilities Commission hearing on the proposed new taxi zone map.

Calls cost the companies in some cases as much as 11 cents, said John H. Royer, president of the owners' association and the Premier Cab Co. Furthermore, he testified, the gasoline consumption and wear on tires on the responding cab are double those for an ordinary trip. Often when the calls are canceled, the drivers are unable to collect the 20-cent charge imposed under present regulations.

Royer contended that the public would benefit by this charge, as it would improve the service of taxis to homes 100 per cent.

"Only 50 per cent of the calls are completed now," he said.

Would Go to Driver

"Cab drivers don't play the call boxes—you just won't find them where business is unprofitable. The additional charge wouldn't hurt the drivers' business. It's not calls that we lack, it's men who will answer them'"

Royer assured the drivers attending the second day of the taxi hearing that the additional 10 cents would go to the driver and not to the company.

Spirited opposition to the commission's proposal to reduce the fare for a ride of less than a mile to two-thirds of a zone rate was voiced throughout the hearing.

Royer testified that this reduction was the only part of the new plan which the owners' association flatly opposed. Otherwise, he said, the owners approved it in principle and had only small quarrels with certain details.

E. E. Dollar, a cab driver, started to question the PUC's authority to base any cab charges on speedometer readings, since a rider in the District appropriations bill has for many years ruled that none of the funds could be used for PUC regulation of taximeters. PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin would not let Dollar enter his question.

Alfred D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, entered as evidence the zoning map he had worked out, which was printed in The Post more than a week before the similar Hankin plan was announced by the PUC.

Calvert's plan, which specifies six zones instead of the four proposed by Hankin, embodies the same principle of dividing each main zone into subzones to equalize fares within zones. Hankin objected that Calvert's plan took no consideration of cost of operation in dividing up the zones. Calvert, admitting that Hankin had the advantage of PUC researchers and accountants in drawing up the Hankin map, said the Calvert plan was a "flesh-and-blood" one. Hankin promised that the commission would give Calvert's map every consideration.

The hearing, which lasted until after 6 p. m., was continued until 9 a. m. today.

Lemke Suit Here Contests Validity of AAA Program

William Lemke, former Republican representative from North Dakota and Union Party Presidential candidate in 1936, yesterday filed suit in District Court attacking the constitutionality of crop control provisions of the amended Agricultural Adjustment Act.

In behalf of four farmers—three from the Midwest and one from Pennsylvania—Lemke asked the court to prohibit Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard from exacting penalties from farmers who exceed alloted wheat acreage quotas.

Obstructs Commerce, He Says

Federal control over the amount of wheat that a farmer can plant, he charged, "does not regulate interstate commerce but obstructs, interferes with and tends to destroy interstate commerce by curtailment of production."

Further, he denied that wheat farming can be classed as interstate commerce in any events, asserting that the bulk of wheat production flows only through intrastate channels.

"Restricting production," he declared, in denying that there was an excess of wheat grown," by erroneous assumptions and subterfuge, in an unconstitutional manner, will cause a shortage."

Lemke, coauthor of the Frazier-Lemke farm bill, listed eight reasons why the AAA law sections involved should be declared illegal. These included statements that it gives the Secretary of Agriculture legislative power; is a revenue-raising scheme but not a regulatory system; deprives citizens of their property without due process of law.

The farmers named as plaintiffs in the suit were Kenneth Bender, of Clinton, Ohio; H. H. Beckman, of Clay Center, Kans.; Clyde F. Snodgrass, of Muddy Creek Forks, Pa., and Alfred Lindauer, of Chelsea, Mich.

They asserted that Wickard is now seeking to collect penalties from them for planting too many acres of winter wheat during 1940-41. He has placed a lien on their wheat crop, they allege, which now blocks them from disposing of it in any manner.

They are asking the court to prohibit him from collecting the fines—totaling more than $2500—and to declare the lien null and void.

Mrs. Elmore Heads D. C. Humane Society

Mrs. Herbert W. Elmore was elected president of the Washington Humane Society Tuesday at its seventy-fourth annual meeting at the Carlton Hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers elected were: George P. Alt, first vice president; Miss Barnes Richardson, Mrs. Wallace Neff, William F. Hitt and Clarence B. Hewes, vice presidents; Frederick A. Genau, treasurer; H. Vanley Empt, secretary.

D. C. Man Fleeced Of $678; Police Hold Suspect

James A. Meeks, 55 years old, colored, 1861 Corcoran Street Northeast, appeared in Police Court yesterday with the story that he lost $678 in attempting to prove to another Negro that anybody can withdraw money from a savings bank account at will.

As consequence, Leslie Swann, 44, who told police he recently came here from a Georgia plantation, was held in $5000 bond for grand jury by Judge John P. McMahon.

Detective Sergt. R. J. Cox related in court, in recounting statements from Meeks, that Swann and two other colored men persuaded Meeks to withdraw the money on the ruse that it could not be done, and then asked Meeks to put the money in a handkerchief which Swann said already contained $1500 of his own money.

Meeks, apparently convinced with the logic that his and Swann's money would be safer in one place, agreed, but later discovered, Cox said, that his money disappeared and the handkerchief contained only worthless paper.

Lawyer Seeks Rehearing on Drunk Charge

Attorneys for M. Edward Buckley, jr., local lawyer recently ordered by the Court of Appeals to stand trial in Police Court on a charge of driving while drunk, yesterday petitioned the appelate court to rehear his case.

Should the recent decision by the tribunal, requiring a trial on the alleged offense, be allowed to stand, it was argued, "it will be impossible for a defendant to rely on any agreement of the corporation counsel."

Buckley had pleaded guilty to a police charge of driving on the wrong side of the street, and was later charged with driving while drunk—both offenses, according to Buckley, "the outgrowth of one identical act."

Buckley contended that he did not have to face the second charge because it would place him in double jeopardy for the same offense, and this view was upheld in Police Court. The Court of Appeals later reversed this judgment, however, and ordered him to stand trial.

Yesterday's petition asks the appelate body to reconsider this decision.

Defense Attorney Charles A. Schaffer told the court there was a "distinct agreement" between Buckley and the corporation counsel's office. He said such agreements are frequently made when evidence in a more serious case is weak and the case can be disposed of by a guilty plea to a minor offense.

"That which was done in this case has been done on numerous occasions before by the corporation counsel. Due to outside pressure, and outside pressure only, was the appellee charged again with the offense of driving while intoxicated," Schaffer said.

Bible Class Group Honors Its Workers

Presentation of awards for outstanding Christian service highlighted last night's annual banquet launching the twentieth anniversary celebration of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association.

It was held at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest, with Dr. Forrest L. Knapp, of New York, general secretary of the World Sunday School Association, as main speaker. Almost 400 people from 110 classes of 25 denominations attended.

Discussing the subject, "Toward a World Christian Community," Dr. Knapp said that such a community could be realized by Christian education, in its broadest sense, and called the Christian home "the cradle of Christian society."

Page McK. Etchison, association president and also a World Sunday School Association official, presented awards—including pen sets and paid enrollments to the Labor Day weekend association conference at Western Maryland College, to the following:

Mrs. Judith King, annual banquet chairman; Miss Laura Lindley, summer conference reporter; E. M. Bryan, association charter member; Howard M. Stackhouse, of Emory Methodist Church, an association vice president; Mrs. Gertrude Donovan, Elton H. Brown, sr., chairman of the annual association Armistice Day service, and Charles H. Cook, chairman of the Easter sunrise service committee.

Also Mrs. Lucille Shannon Etchison, conference pianist; William R. Schmucker, association treasurer-song leader; George Harris, association executive secretary, and Harold S. King, a vice president.

Etchison also led a special toast to women workers of the organization and special women guests at the dinner, presenting them roses. One so honored was 84-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth Page, for 50 years a Sunday school teacher, most of that time with the Golden Page Class of Anacostia Methodist Church.

The anniversary celebration will continue four months, climaxing with the annual conference.

Symphony Drive For Funds Starts; Music Need Cited

Continuance of the National Symphony Orchestra was seen as "a matter of prime importance" by Maj. Howard C. Bronson, music officer of the War Department's Special Services Branch, as 800 volunteer workers yesterday began their canvass of metropolitan Washington for the $104,000 necessary to maintain the orchestra through its 1942-43 season.

First report on the results of the drive will be made at a luncheon for workers tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock in the Hotel Mayflower.

Maj. Bronson said America may learn from England of the importance to a nation at war of preserving its music and musical organizations. Music, it was found, loosed taut nerves, and eased the ache of hearts saddened by the loss of loved ones."

A branch office for contributions to the drive was opened yesterday in the lobby of the Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest. Headquarters remain in room 1111 of the same building.

Government Sets Price Ceilings On Wood Pulp

The Government fixed the prices yesterday on domestic and foreign wood pulp, basic material in paper production.

Using a single pricing system, with allowances for freight costs depending on geographical location of mills, the Office of Price Administration set the ceiling approximately at current levels, covering sales in the United States or for export.

The only increase above present prices was on domestically produced groundwood pulp, used in making newsprint. In establishing a ceiling of $46 a delivered ton on this grade, $6 above current prices, OPA emphasized that the new maximum conformed with present price levels on imported groundwood pulp.

Approximately 80 per cent of all the groundwood consumed in the United States is imported from Canada.

Boyer and De Havilland Join Victory Caravan

Tickets on Sale Saturday for Big Benefit; Old Friends Well Met in 'Sullivan's Travels;' Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

CHARLES BOYER AND OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND, two of Hollywood's most gifted and popular stars, are the latest to sign on the line of dots for the Hollywood Victory Caravan, scheduled to open a tour of 14 key cities in Loew's Capitol Theater on Thursday night, April 30.

CHARLES BOYER

If you haven't seen "The Male Animal," currently on the screens, you remember Miss de Havilland for her unforgettable Melanie in "Gone With the Wind." If you haven't seen "GWTW," you will soon. Any feminine heart that doesn't flutter a bit at mention of the name of Charles Boyer just hasn't been exposing itself to the most pulsating of the cinema's romances these past few years. As costars, it was these two who managed to "Hold Back the Dawn," no mean feat in itself. Anyhow, here they come.

As another addendum to the prattle that occupied these lines no longer ago than yesterday, it might be noted that George Garrett, general chairman of the Washington committee having the effulgent event in charge, has named Carter T. Barron, eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc., and John J. Payette, zone manager for the Warner Brothers, to head a special committee of local showmen to supervise the caravan shenanigans, to which all of "show business" in Washington will lend a hand.

But the most important item, in the view of all those actively concerned, is that tickets will go on sale this Saturday at a special box-office at Loew's Capitol. As we were saying, prices range from $1.50 to $20. And, as we were not saying, interest already is so high that an early sell-out is anticipated. Which would mean $26,000 for the Army-Navy Relief Funds, sole beneficiaries of the tour.

And now about that "GWTW" business. The David O. Selznick monumental, Technicolor picturization of the Margaret Mitchell novel is one of two "return engagements" booked for early dates in the Loew houses. It will follow "To the Shores of Tripoli" at the Palace, for its third engagement on F Street. The other is Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," coming back after all these years to the Columbia on April 30. One of the most noted of the silent comedies, this old button-buster has been modernized by Chaplin with added sound and narrative spoken by the Old Master himself. Its laughs are said to be longer and louder than ever—which hardly seems necessary.

Shades of a Misty Past!

When we delightful dopes of the drayma desks previewed "Sullivan's Travels" yesterday, some of us began to suspect that Author-Director Preston Sturges must have dug up a list of old Washington favorities to make up his cast. In support of Joel McCrea and Veronica Lake, for example, the keen of memory do not necessarily have to be sharp of eye to detect the presence of Almira Sessions, Capital socialite, who crashed the professional stage via the old Aborn Light Opera Company; Willard Robertson, former member of the Columbia Players, between tricks as an attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission; Frank Moran, who was a gob on the old Presidential yacht, Mayflower, before he became a pretty good professional ringster, and Julius Tannen, "The Chatterbox," long an ace headliner in the golden era of two-a-day vaudeville at B. F. Keith's. All right, go see for yourself, Friday at the Earle.

The Defense Savings Staff of the United States Treasury Department announces that in conjunction with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer it will launch a Nation-wide Ship Ahoy Minute Girls tour to stimulate the sale of bonds and stamps. M-G-M is contributing Jetsy Parker and Dorothy Schoemer, starlets from the cast of the Eleanor Powell-Red Skelton musical film, "Ship Ahoy," the picture that started out too late to be "I'll Take Manila." Miss Parker was star drum majorette of the 1939-40 Pasadena Tournament of Roses and Miss Schoemer has been a prominent night club entertainer on both coasts. The tour will be engineered by the veteran Bill Ferguson, of M-G-M, and Carlton Duffus, formerly ditto, but now in charge of motion pictures and special events for bonds and stamps promotion with the Treasury Department plays here May 23.

All Warber Brothers theaters will serve as collection depots for books on this Friday, April 17, the day designated by President Roosevelt as Victory Book Day So in case you've finishd your book, why not turn it in so one of the boys in camp can get a crack at it?

Dots and Dashes

The much-discussed film of "The Invaders," with Leslie Howard, Laurence Olivier, Raymond Massey and a stellar cast, will be previewed in the auditorium of the National Press Club on Sunday night, April 26, under the auspices of the Washington Newspaper Guild . . . Whadda ya know? Eddie Dowling, who presented Julie Haydon in both Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance" and Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," dropped by Catholic University Tuesday night to see her in "Art and Prudence" . . . She'll next be starring for him again . . . Thanks to Bette Davis for starring in "In This Our Life" . . . Otherwise Frank La Falce probably never would have sent us that copy of the Ellen Glasgow novel . . . And that reminds me . . . We'll have to finish "For Whom the Bell Tolls," one day . . . George Washington U.'s Cue and Curtain works fast . . . Presenting this season's "The Land Is Bright," by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, tomorrow and Saturday nights as third production of its season . . . "Our Russian Front" goes a second week at the Little—as it should.

Petain-Adder-and-He'll-Probably-Sting-You Note

As far as I can see, all we got in the prize package with that case of Vichy was a brassy, Nazi Laval-leer!

Takes a Chance; Makes Self Ugly

Precedent as old as Hollywood itself has been smashed by the fact that an actress has made herself as homely as possible for her first screen closeup.

Instead of concentrating on looking lovely, Cass Daley, who debuts in "The Fleet's In," goes to the opposite extreme in her big solo number, during which she makes a series of comic valentine faces.

HEDDA HOPPER

Devi, Devi Hangs Over Thy Head!

Hollywood, Cal., April 15. The Tahitian set for "Moon and Sixpence" out at Pathe is so real and so glamorous that, despite the horrible example of George (Gauguin) Sanders staring you in the face, you're tempted to embrace a beach-comber's life. And it looks as if that pet, Florence Bates, as the half-caste "Widow Johnson" has done just that. She billows happily about the set in one of those missionary Mother-Hubbards, with a wreath of flowers in her hair, looking for all the world like a lady Dionysus crowned with vine leaves. Of the dozens of bee-yootiful native girls, as gay as butterflies in their bright sarongs, four—Devi-Dja, Devi-Minah, Devi-Tinah and Devi-Wani—stand out like swans in a duck run. They're the real thing, perfectly poised, with the carriage and aloof dignity of young empresses; and why Messrs. Loew and Lewin had to look farther than Devi-Wani for Gauguin's native wife, Ata, is one of those Hollywood mysteries.

JOAN CRAWFORD

When Joan Crawford and Allen Jenkins (both former professional dancers) were doing their jitterbug sequence in "He Kissed the Bride," who should be visiting on the set but Lieut. John Canady, of the Naval Air Cadets, and Dewayne Truitt, who is "Jitterbug Champion of the Pacific Fleet." Joan noticed Dewayne's twitching feet, took pity on him, and they put on an impromptu routine that was but sensational!

In every adventure picture Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine have worked in Leo's had to take a lot of shoving around from Andy, so now, in "Danger in the Pacific," he's having a grand time, as a British intelligence officer, flipping Andy around his head with some fancy jui-jitsu work.

Gene Autry has gone to his Ardmore, Okla., ranch to pick up a trainload of cows and horses for his rodeo, which reopens in Cleveland this week, then moves on to Chicago, Pittsburgh, Washington and Philadelphia on six weeks tour. Percentage of proceeds goes to Army and Navy relief funds.

That series of five shows that Charlie Collins put on at the camps in and around San Diego over the weekend made such a hit that USO Camp Shows, Inc., are considering sending them on a coastwide tour. In the cast, headed by Charlie's wife, Dorothy Stone, and John Howard, were Mary Brian, Sterling Holloway, Claudia Dell, Jimmy Bush, Vera Marsh, George Grandee, Bill Orr and Milburn Stone, featuring many of George Grandee's songs from the musical comedy in which Collins and Dorothy Stone starred this winter.

When Mary Martin sang "Kiss the Boys Goodby" and 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy" in Spanish for the Mexican soldiers down in Ensenada they pretty nearly took the place apart. Now she's making recordings of the same for the 300 requests she's had since her return.

Arthur Caeser, himself a wisecracker, says the wisecrack has set intelligent conversation back 40 years in this country. Explains that when "smarty pants" get together, they pay no attention to what the other fellow is saying, but concentrate on topping his gags.

Eddie Reagan, now working in "Strictly in the Groove," is a very downhearted young man. He has five brothers in the service or armed merchant marine, and his sister is a Red Cross nurse; but Eddie got the brush-off because of a broken right arm which never healed properly. When Eddie asked if they weren't going to let down the bars soon on physical examinations, the doctor said, "Sure, buddy, as soon as the Japs get to Figueroa Street, we'll give you a buzz!"

RKO-Keith's

A pox on all who've said audiences wouldn't appreciate, enjoy, relish, or what have you, a screen telling of Stephen Vincent Benet's imaginative story, "The Devil and Daniel Webster." Audiences seem to be doing exactly that and frankly to its surprise, RKO-Keith's is continuing "All That Money Can Buy" for a second week.

That title change is just about the only variation the film-makers have made upon an original short story that captured the hearts of all who read it; matter of fact, a lot of us rugged individualists are going around calling it "The Devil and Daniel Webster" anyway. But by any name, Keith's film belongs on the must list of those tired with the run-of-the-mill, boy-meets-girl yarns that popularly are supposed to be manna to us workers.

With Walter Huston to play the Devil—in New England parlance, one "Mr. Scratch"—and Edward Arnold to infuse understanding and dignity into an admirable Daniel Webster, the film has inherent promises. Scratch's victim is a troubled New Hampshire who, when all seems against him, vows he'd sell his soul to the Devil just for an even break out of life. Up pops Mr. Scratch. Things go well with James Craig's manly farmer for seven years, too well; he becomes the most hated man in his county. Then Scratch comes to claim his own. Things look bad for the soul of Jabez Stone.

But he has a friend in good Daniel Webster. Summing up his considerable courage, Webster remarks to the Devil—alias Scratch—that no man can be convicted without a trial by jury, he finds himself faced with as evil a band of "peers" as ever counsel for the defense has had to convince. In a stirring five-minute plea to this jury of traitors, cutthroats and thieves, Daniel Webster takes a stand that frees his client. One might expect a lesser film to end on this sun-streaked motif, but the fade-out finds wicked Scratch leering at the audience and pointing to you—just as he has been doing all these years since Daniel Webster defeated him.

The supporting cast is exceptionally fine. Arnold and Huston are superb in the title roles, while James Craig, Anne Shirley, Jane Darwell and Simon Simons are as life-like as candid-camera shots.

The "March of Time's" "America's New Army," and Walt Disney's "Old MacDonald's Duck" also continue.

Actress Ready for Salad Famine

Fay Helm, currently before the cameras in "Halfway to Shanghai," isn't worried about the Army's plans for evacuating Japs now operating truck gardens in the coastal areas inland. She'll still eat.

Leasing a home at Manhattan Beach, she discovered the place included a completely planted vegetable tract of 3 acres, with portions of the crop ready for table use.

The property also boasts of chicken-raising equipment, which she'll utilize by buying 50 hens for egg and fryer purposes.

Script's New Use; Keeps Star Awake

Fred MacMurray now has found the perfect time and place for studying his dialogue. As an air raid warden, Fred has been working the weekend "graveyard" shift, anywhere from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. The hours from 3 a. m. on are the ones that drag the most, he has discovered. So out comes the script, about the time he would otherwise be falling asleep.

At about 10 o'clock one Monday morning, however, MacMurray blew up completely in his lines for Paramount's "Take a Letter, Darling."

"That's funny," he quipped to Director Mitchell Leisen. "I knew that speech perfectly at 4 a. m."

Zorina Decides She Will Dance

The lithe and snapely Zorina was discussing her art with Paulette Goddard who has long nursed ballet dancing ambitions. Paulette commented on the terrific strenuousness of it all.

"You," said Zorina, "are the first person in Hollywood who has ever sympathized with me about that. Dancing is work—hard physical work. The strain is utterly exhausting. That is why I've always wanted to be a dramatic actress instead of a dancer."

A moment later Paulette was called before the camera for a scene in Cecil B. De Mille's "Reap the Wild Wind," in which she was seized violently by Ray Milland, picked up and tossed over a ship's rail into the "ocean"—a huge studio tank.

Zorina watched the take, saw Paulette go sailing over the rail into the water, and come up sputtering. The dancer shrugged her shoulders.

"Who wants to be a dramatic actress?" she said. "I think I'll stick to dancing."

Broadway Bulletins

New York, April 15.

A private poll taken among the New York drama critics indicates that for the first time since its organization the Critics Circle will make no award for the best American play. The critics will meet on Thursday, when their decision is expected—that none of the American plays produced this season deserves a prize . . . Walter Winchell will become a movie producer for the benefit of the Navy Relief Fund . . . Camille Chautemps, the former premier of France who came here as Vichy's unofficial observer, now is trying to arrange for American press associations to distribute his articles.

ANN CORIO

The story is being told of a young college graduate who decided to pursue a political career. He went to a veteran politician for advice . . . "The first thing you must do is join an athletic club," the veteran suggested, "to keep your body in shape. The next thing you must do is go to church regularly to keep your soul in shape" . . . "And then?" asked the youngster . . . "And then, when your body is in shape and your soul is in shape, join a Democratic club," the veteran advised, "to keep 'em both together."

Ed Murrow, who was CBS' correspondent in London, had a dinner date at the home of CBS's publicity director, Louis Ruppel. Murrow soon is returning to London, and his host wanted him to enjoy an evening of complete relaxation. "I've warned all the other guests that there must be no war talk," Ruppel informed . . . "How will you stop them from talking about the war?" asked Murrow . . . "I've found a way," Ruppel assured . . . The guests arrived, met Murrow and the conversation throughout the dinner was completely free of war talk. For the food was delivered and served by two men especially hired for the occasion—two Japanese.

Ann Corio, the famous strip-teaser, is going to Hollywood to play the role of "Jungle Siren," in a movie opposite Buster Crabbe . . . Henny Youngman went to Washington last week and couldn't get a hotel room. "Washington, D. C.," said Youngman, "stands for Washington, 'Damn Crowded'" . . . Pat DiCicco, the bridegroom of Gloria Vanderbilt, will be in the Army shortly . . . When the RAF bombed Turin last week it wasn't the first time they were guided by lights which hadn't been blacked out. In the previous raid upon the Fiat works in Turin the alarm was spread in ample time. All the lights in the four Fiat buildings were put out. One sign, however, remained illuminated—the large one-word sign over the factory, which read "FIAT."

Robert Hopkins, son of Harry Hopkins, who has been a private these many months, became a corporal last week . . . Alfred Lunt, who is devoting his time now to the Theater Wing's Canteen, is starting a campaign to establish the canteen in a 3-story clubhouse, where the enlisted men not only would find food and entertainment, but also rest and a place where they could write letters . . . The 7-year-old Ben Cooper, the newest replacement in the cast of "Life With Father," delivers his lines onstage without a trace of nervousness. "Do you get nervous?" Ben was asked by Howard Lindsay. "No, I don't get nervous," he answered. "I get $50."

David Cowles, who weighs almost 300 pounds, is the host at the new Penguin Club. He's short and stout—and that's why Dwight Wiman, the producer, thought Cowles would be ideal to play the role of Hercules in the forthcoming musical, "All's Fair" . . . Wiman spoke to him about the job. "This is a musical version of 'The Warrior's Husband,'" Wiman explained . . . "I just want to know one thing," Cowles interrupted. "When I'm on the stage, will I be standing or sitting?" . . . "Standing," said the producer . . . "In that case," shrugged the overweight Cowles, "the answer is no."

Coming Back Into Capital View

MICHELE MORGAN AND JAMES STEWART as welcome back into the public eye as they were last January, when this photograph was made at a President's Birthday event. Miss Morgan will soon be seen at RKO-Keith's in "Joan of Paris" and they are after the now Lieut. James Stewart for the Hollywood Victory Caravan, at Loew's Capitol, April 30

Anathema Gone

Alarm clocks have always been anathema to Hedy Lamarr, but since starting her role in "Crossroads" she purchased one for the first time.

All because she wears elaborate coiffures as the wife of William Powell in the film—and this is the first time in her career she's had to report to the hairdressing department before going onto the set. Gone is her long bob—in its place are intricate rolls, coils and twisted knots. They mean rising an hour earlier.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Hollywood, April 15 (INS).—Para's "Stage Door Canteen," suggested by the New York haven for service men and sponsored by Tallulah Bankhead, Gertrude Lawrence and other Broadway headliners, brings up a situation. Republic has the same idea in "House of Stars." Won't there be fireworks? Seems to be a perfect epidemic of rival studios with the same story ideas. Monogram and Twentieth Century-Fox both claim the title "Hot Rubber," the picture dealing with stolen tires. Charles Rogers is peeved because he says he got to the "model" idea first with his "Powers Models," and now Columbia has "Cover Girls of 1942."

VIRGINIA BRUCE

I suppose these kinks will be ironed out some way, but nobody seems to be backing down. To get back to Para's "Stage Door Canteen," Buddy de Sylva read Lester Cole's original story about the Broadway actresses who furnish entertainment and free meals to the boys stationed around New York and liked it so well he bought it pronto.

When the first "invisible" story was made by Universal in 1935, with Claude Rains as "The Invisible Man," we didn't know nazism was to turn the world topsy-turvy. Since, two other thrillers with the "invisible" idea have been made—one in 1939 and the other in 1940—with Virginia Bruce as "The Invisible Woman." Now the fourth, a Frank Lloyd production, gets going and this one, called "The Invisible Spy," is laid in Nazi Germany with the Hell Hitler gangsters trying to steal the patent of the invisible ray.

John Hall plays the son of the inventor with lovely Ilona Massey as a British gal who masquerades as a German spy. Peter Lorre and Sir Cedric Hardwicke are all a part of what sounds like a good old melodrama.

A versatile and talented young man is Charlie Lederer, who writes and directs with equal facility. He is preparing "Above Suspicion" for Myrna Loy and William Powell, working it out for Victor Saville to direct. Charlie's first directorial job, "Fingers at the Window," won the praise of the M-G-M bosses and it is the irony of fate that Lew Ayres is the star. And now Lew will probably come back, having applied to the Medical Division for a post, so all may yet be well.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: June Duprez and Don Castle are finding plenty to talk about these days; Frances Gifford swears by the great horn spoon she has no more intention of marrying Wyn Rocamora, and he her, than she has of flying to the moon.

Paul Yawitz has been called to St. Louis by the death of his mother. Hear tell his romance with Mrs. Ria Gable is no more; the hair-do Mrs. Bill Powell is affecting is like the old-time flapper bob of Colleen Moore's; Ronald Reagan rates a second lieutenancy in the cavalry, as he should, having been in the reserves for years.

New FilmTriumph; Bronze Nag Rears!

An engineering feat had to be achieved in order that a statue of a motion picture star could be made in Hollywood. It is a 12-foot bronzed figure of Joel McCrea riding a horse, and it was built at Paramount studios for use in "The Great Man's Lady," which has Barbara Stanwyck in the title role.

The difficulty was that Producer-Director William A. Wellman wanted the horse rearing on its hind legs. Because of the tremendous amount of weight, engineers had to figure out a perfect cantilever balance so that it would not split in two.

We're On Our Way

There is comfort for those who are urging an early offensive in Ernest Bevin's statement that Britain is now producing as many planes as Germany and that within five or six weeks the United States will be turning out as many planes as Germany, Italy and Japan combined.

As in the case of Great Britain, it has taken this country some little while to get going. Much time was wasted; considerable confusion dogged our steps; bottlenecks continually developed. Nor are we entirely out of the woods, even now. Yet no one aware of what this country is now beginning to do in the way of war production can help but be excited and gratified by the over-all picture. Thus the reports that came out of Detroit last week on the occasion of a WPB tour for newspaper correspondents of the war plants in that area spoke with uniform enthusiasm of the magnificent job that is being done to harness the great resources of the unexampled automobile industry to the task of turning out planes and tanks and guns.

Every plant visited by the correspondents was ahead of its production schedule. Great vistas are opening up as new factories approach their peak effort and old plants are one after another being converted to war uses. From the Willow Run plant alone there will roll off the assembly lines before many months have passed more heavy bombers than all the factories of Germany are capable of producing. And while that plant is exceptional in size, it is, after all, only one among a vast number that are being or will soon be harnessed to the task of making the United States in truth the arsenal of the democracies.

What is being done in Detroit, no less than what is being done in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and many other industrial centers, should not make us complacent. It will take time before the results of the efforts being made in those great war-production regions are fully felt. In the meantime we are suffering and may for a while continue to suffer damaging blows. But if the spirit shown by the managers and workers in our war plants becomes the spirit of the entire Nation, we have reason to be hopeful of the outcome. The American giant is at last shaking off his lethargy and girding his loins.

General Johnson

That a man could be at once an extreme individualist and a splendid soldier is something of a paradox. But American history has given us several examples of the paradox, the most brilliant, of course, being Andrew Jackson. Another example was General Hugh Samuel Johnson.

It is interesting, though not necessarily significant, that Johnson, like Jackson, came from the stock called, somewhat inaccurately, "Scotch Irish." What is really significant is that Johnson, like Jackson, was the product—and one of the last products—of the American frontier. As a child he made the journey with his family from Kansas to the Indian Territory in a covered wagon. It was to his frontier boyhood that he owed most of the picturesque mannerisms from which no amount of West Point spit-and-polish or regular Army routine could ever divorce him. It is said that there was hardly a top-kicker or mule-skinner in the whole Army that could equal him for inventiveness and variety in invective. All who knew him in his NRA days will believe it.

But above everything else he was ambitious, and scarcely a man to be satisfied, as were most officers in those days, to let time take its course in the matter of advancement. His big chance did not come until 1917. As a member of General Crowder's staff, he employed his legal knowledge in the preparation of several important sections of the first draft law. To this was doubtless due in part his promotion in a single year from the grade of captain to that of youngest brigadier general in the whole Army. But here he was cheated of an opportunity to display his talents in the field. For the Armistice came just as he was preparing to go overseas. Some suggestion of what he might have accomplished, however, came later when he was called from his premature retirement to take command of NRA of unhappy memory. Whatever the legal and economic fallacies of the NRA and the statute on which it was based, it became in Johnson's hands a masterpiece of promotion, organization, morale building and what we call nowadays "the offensive spirit."

Since 1933, when he became one of our great national figures, there have been many public questions—domestic and foreign—on which The Post and General Johnson have held opposite views. But no amount of controversy could weaken our essential respect for this engaging, vital and utterly American personality. General Johnson's country is much the poorer for losing him. It is doubly pitiful that he should die at a time when not only his wit and pungency of phrase, but also his professional instincts and experience, made him such an invaluable critic of events.

Access To The Enemy

A condition rather than a theory unites America and Russia on the eve of what might be the final effort of Japo-Hitlerism to overrun the world. That condition is a dire threat to their survival. With the ice breaking in the Volga, the season is at hand for a Nazi drive which is aimed, in one way or another, at wiping out the Russian army. Japan seems to be itching to make sure of the kill. Nobody knows this better than Moscow itself. If we remember Pearl Harbor, they remember Port Arthur nearly 40 years ago, when the Japanese attacked Russia while their emissaries were talking peace in Moscow.

That the Russians fear another stab in the back is shown in the current comment of the Russian press. Pravda has celebrated the first anniversary of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact by making a direct warning to Japan. "It is necessary," says this official newspaper, "that the Japanese military and Fascist cliques whose heads have been turned by military successes realize that their prattle about an annexationist war in the north may cause damage, in the first place and most of all, to Japan herself."

The peril in which Russia stands from this pincers threat is our peril, too. If Hitler spreads over southern Russia, he would get all the oil he needs. In other words, Nazi Germany would no longer have an Achilles heel. And then there would be little to stop Hitler's march toward a junction at the Persian Gulf with Japanese sea power moving into the Red Sea. Such a junction would mean that the Axis would have half-won the war of communications. That would wholly disrupt the supply lines which at present link the United Nations.

But even more ominous to our security would be a Japanese land move into Russia. For such a drive would not be west toward Moscow, but northeast toward America. It would be directed along the northern rim of the Pacific which General William Mitchell once called "the key-point to the whole ocean." Only a 60-mile strip separates Arctic Russia from Alaska, and on the Siberian side there are Soviet air bases which the Japanese covet for an attack upon America.

Thus there is a community of interest between America and Russia which is crystal clear. To be sure, there are some Americans who refuse to admit it. As Archibald MacLeish said in New York on Monday, they do not want to win with Russia. But if we do not want to win with Russia, we shall have to go down to defeat and enslavement. There is no other alternative. This is the situation that measures the tie binding our two countries. It is just as close as the link which bound the struggle for our freedom with the aid we got from the French. If we had not accepted such aid because the French lay under a royal despotism equally with our British enemy, we should not have won our freedom. Similarly we can only secure our freedom today by joining our fighting cause with Russia's. There is a wholesome realism in that relation resting upon the bedrock of a common interest.

That this is recognized in the White House is shown in the first priority which is now being given to our shipments to Russia. But Russia wants more than material help. She is demanding the opening of a second front in Europe to divert some of the blows which otherwise seem about to fall on Russia. Such a demand, presumably, is being examined right now at the war conferences in London. But the danger to Russia—as Pravda suggests—equally to ourselves lies in the Pacific. We should thus appeal to the realism of the Kremlin to reciprocate our assistance by lend-leasing to the United States—on the model of the destroyers-for-bases deal with Britain—some of the Pacific bases belonging to Russia.

Such an arrangement in itself would be of vast benefit to both countries. At present those bases—which begin at East Cape and go all the way along the Siberian coastline to Petropavlovsk—are a bait to the Japanese. To be sure, the arrangement would not improve relations between Russia and Japan. But the fact must be obvious to the Kremlin that it would involve no greater threat to Russian neutrality in the Pacific than already exists. It would likewise be a demonstration to the fighting Russians that we are just as much bent upon total victory as they are.

Yet it is the absence of those bases which prevents this country from making a direct attack upon Japan. And there are no bases in our possession from which a large scale and continuous attack on Japan can be launched within the near future. That is the reason that the Japanese feel so safe in leaving their home bases relatively unprotected while they go careering into the great oceans. "The forward march of Hitler and Hitlerism," in the President's words, "can be stopped, and it will be stopped." But it can be stopped only by the complete cooperation of the United Nations in facilitating access to the enemy.

Corporate Profits

The current issue of the Federal Reserve Bulletin contains an analysis of corporate profits that would well repay study by Congressional tax experts.

Out of 245 companies—all large or moderately large—for which earnings data are available for the years 1939, 1940 and 1941, 49 showed an increase of 200 per cent or more in profits over 1939. However, this total includes some companies reporting deficits in the earlier year. At the other end of the scale, 49 companies showed a decrease in earnings compared with 1939. Contrary to the general assumption, moreover, the sharpest increases were most frequently found in the smallest of the groups covered by the survey. In case of the durable goods industries, engaged largely on war contracts, increases in net profits were frequently extremely sharp. On the other hand, a large proportion of the companies in the nondurable goods group reported earnings either not much above or actually below the 1939 level.

Since these profits computations represent returns after deduction of taxes, it is evident that the severe increases in Federal earnings taxes have not prevented many corporations from enjoying a much larger volume of profits. The Federal Reserve article puts it this way: "Last year's records indicate that corporate earnings before taxes were larger in the aggregate than in 1940 by an amount more than sufficient to absorb the considerable increase in income and excess profits taxes."

But while there remains a substantial surplus "in the aggregate" available for recapture by the tax collector, that surplus is most unevenly distributed, with some companies enjoying extraordinary returns, and others sharing scarcely at all in the war boom. It should be remembered, too, that many concerns not engaged in war work face a leaner earnings period this year than last, when the effects of priorities and shortages of various sorts were only just beginning to be felt.

For China

Sun Yat-sen, the father of the Chinese Republic, once explained the strength of China when he exclaimed that the Chinese were like grains of loose sand. He said it impatiently, not as a tribute. Dr. Sun at the time was in the throes of a setback in the revolution which eventually set up the present government of China. Yet it was precisely to this characteristic of the Chinese that Sun owed the triumph of his crusade. When the wind began to blow, these millions of sand particles developed a cohesive force which swept the entire country. China is intensely individualistic—some say familistic—and no regimented power is mightier than the massed movement of individual wills.

Once again the Chinese wind began to blow when the Japanese invaded China. And once again the world was given a demonstration of the strength which has borne China through four millenniums of recorded history. What a feat is contained in China's resistance we are only just beginning to realize. Japan, far from being the pushover which some of us had imagined, is piling up victories outside China with one of the best-equipped military machines in history. For five years, however, the Chinese, with few arms and no military organization, have stood their ground.

This seeming unconquerability is one reason that we admire the Chinese. But the admiration is now tinged with gratitude as we see that Japan's essay into China was aimed at being the first round in a career of conquest which includes this Nation. Thus China in these last five years has been occupying the first line of our Pacific defense. We can pay our tribute in many ways, but in none so individual as in making the new drive of the United China Relief a success. The goal is seven million dollars and the drive to obtain it opened yesterday. The money will go to repair in some measure the personal havoc in the lives of these gallant particles of sand which the Japanese have wrought.

NOSTALGIA

There is a far off look upon the faces
Of the strangers in the market places,

And eyes reach with the mind's eye
Over the transoms of the sky

Back of the golden dusk they stare
At mirages in the air

And the eyes speak with heart's word;
And over the tumult love has heard

The lonely one, the eager one
Grow eloquent till light is gone,

Moving their lips with the moving crowd
But nothing is ever said aloud.

Give India Freedom

If Britain is sincere in her claim to be a democracy, why does she not now give India her freedom? If Mr. Churchill believes in President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms, then let him grant them unequivocally to India, and get them solidly behind the Allies in this titanic struggle. If thousands of our boys are going to be killed on British soil (Australia and India), then we certainly should have some say so about the Indian situation.

The old hackneyed cliches, now being applied to the Indians, "they fight among themselves" and "they can't govern themselves," are worn threadbare. It's not for a foreign race and government to tell them what's good for them. Let the Indians thresh out their own difficulties, as every other free group does. We Americans have been bickering among ourselves ever since we threw off the British yoke, and yet we seem to have fared sufficiently well to become the greatest country in the world.

Commission Dodge

I read in today's Post an interesting article. It said the draft may bog down and married men may have to be taken. This strikes me as unfair. Why? Because there are lots of single able-bodied men not now being taken. I lived in Washington until January. What happened when a Government attorney expert, or even clerk, was put in 1-A. He filed an application to become an officer in the Army or Navy, and the draft board said sure and forgot about it. Why don't you check? I personally know several who really got deferments because of saying, "I'm going to become commissioned."

I think everybody should sacrifice, but it makes my blood boil when people, who are single, can get deferred because they say they are going to be commissioned in the Navy.

Slow-Up Slackers

This writer is a small merchant who has two sons serving with the American Marines. He believes the rank and file of American labor is most loyal and patriotic, with a keen realism of what we are all up against. But—why do these peculiar persons who are out fighting legislation to temporarily discontinue the 40-hour-a-week law invariably dodge the issue? There is a malignant cancerous growth imbedded within the vitals of American labor, and for some reason or other labor leaders refuse to permit an operation to remove it. This cancerous growth is the union racketeer who encourages what is known as the "slow-up" man. Yes, we have those slow-up slackers in almost every industrial plant. How do I know this? Why, just get yourself a small suburban drug store and you cannot help but hear the evidence. Customers who are conscientious American laborers, desiring to do their part in this fight to preserve the last vestige of civilization tell me these things, and I absolutely know they all are not lying. They are too numerous—these complaints.

For instance: There is the welder who left this city for another city at the request of a contractor who needed extra welders for work in building our much needed ships. This man returned within a few days disgusted. "They wouldn't let me work. I figured that pipe I welded cost the Government about $80 when $15 would have been more than a fair price."

The man who works at night in a local iron works plant. He informs me that he worked 15 minutes last night and received pay for 8 hours. The slow-up man blocked him. And on and on with so many instances that space will not allow me to relate. Whose tax money are they wasting? Are they helping the young American lad who is feverishly tossing amid shrieking bombs upon an improvised bed, suffering with the fatal gangrene at Corregidor? The slackers—are they caring a damn for the struggling young American youth who fights off the burning waves of a torpedoed ship in shark-infested waters of the Pacific?

Yes, labor made great and deserved gains before Pearl Harbor. When this battle is won further gains will be resumed and won — provided the cancerous growth is arrested. America is beginning to lose her freedom when one class or group begins to demand dictatorial powers and favors to the exclusion of all other groups. And the little Congressman or Senator who imagines he is fooling the folks back home when he is disgustingly made the victim of a maintained lobby that is so powerful as to cause him to imagine he can squirm around and evade the trust put in him, is really making himself a victim of scornful pity.

War Pun

The Nazis have run knee-deep into trouble in Russia. Hitler's soldiers have been dying there by the tens of thousands. Correct? Well, since at least World War I, the Germans have called their country the Fatherland. Since their bloody Fuehrer has kept attacking in Russia regardless of cost, we infer that he is using his best troops for cannon-fodder. Why, then, shouldn't Hitler call his country the "Fodderland?" Essential Bread and Butter Policy

Tuesday, April 14, the New World commemorated a significant date, Pan-American Day, which was noted by the official recognition of Western Hemisphere republics representing 356 million people—Americans all. What better fitting tribute to inter-American solidarity than this display of continental unity to the forces of lust and dictatorship

In celebrating this important event we should not, however, be blinded by the tinsel and trappings of superficial and patronizing policies of ethereal uplift. Our Southern friends need more food and the opportunity for gainful employment and less intellectual cultivation. Heretofore our efforts to cement the friendship of the South and Central American people have been along educational and cultural lines. It was thought that through elevating esthetic standards and promoting the exchange of ideas and personnel that the people of the Western Hemisphere would aspire to common objectives. But the cultural and diplomatic maneuvers of the past have proven both costly and ineffectual.

Now, what might be characterized as a "bread and butter" policy is rapidly shaping. The new plan calls for the physical transfer of idle American machinery and technological skills to the Southern republics. There boundless natural resources and available man power will be coupled to inaugurate new industrial production designed to raise living standards and add to the comfort and profit of all the people of the Western Hemisphere.

This planet-wide conflict is not merely "another war." Its scope and penetration tax the credulity of the uninformed. It is a crusade. A crusade for moral principles, unhampered markets and the right of unrestricted internal national development. To the south lie 21 friendly American governments, possessing an abundance of raw materials and unlimited, unfettered labor. Here in America we have hundreds of manufacturers of civilian products whose machinery lies idle and collecting dust because of priority legislation. The solution is practical and mutually beneficial. Through the expediency of transferring these small, unneeded manufacturers not engaged in the war effort we would be utilizing vast stores of virgin resources in Latin America and helping our Southern allies to attain some measure of self-sufficiency.

The all-out effort for war production, the blockades and submarine activities have put a virtual stop to the international trade of South and Central America and Mexico. Their imports have dwindled to a point where Latin-Americans are living from their shelves. When their present inventories have been depleted they will have no recourse but to solicit aid from the United States.

The "bread and butter" policy foresees and forestalls this contingency. By providing these republics with our own idle machinery ordinarily used for nonessential production we will be rendering a tangible, welcome assistance to the contracting governments, and we will, in addition, be providing them with the means of increasing their internal revenue through new industry, and thus a resulting ability to meet previously contracted United States obligations, a burden which they are unable to bear under present conditions. We may, then, term the "bread and butter" policy "peace and debt insurance."

We must help the Southern republics to help themselves. Their vast resources must be utilized in such a manner that lasting benefit will accrue to all concerned, i. e., the United States, the transferring manufacturer and the country accepting the offer of new industry.

It is with deep earnestness that I say we must tool up South and Central America and Mexico, or Germany will. It is only in this way that America will be able to participate in future Pan-American Days as a dominant factor.

The Post Impressionist

Teapot Tempest

The Coordinator of Sirens blew round a corner of Dupont Circle in an April squall and paused outside the Office for Coordination of Civilian Distraction to greet the Coordinator of Exits and Entrances.

"Hi, Coord!" he said, using the customary OCCD salutation. "Don't let those sirens scare you. We're testing them at noon."

"Well, I always figure that what you don't hear can't scare you," answered the Coordinator of Exits and Entrances.

For some reason this piece of homely philosophy displeased the Coordinator of Sirens. Looking miffed, he swung into the lobby.

A vast mahogany desk barred his way. "Is there anything I can do for you?" inquired the Coordinator of Callers, a blonde, with a Public Relations smile.

The Coordinator of Sirens looked more miffed. He was in no mood to be mistaken for the Public.

"You may tell the Coordinator of Coordination that the Coordinator of Sirens is on his way up," he informed her severely.

The Coordinator of Callers lifted a receiver.

"Extension ny-un ny-un ny-un ny-un," she chanted.

"Coordinator of Coordination Office," chanted the Coordinator of Coordination's Coordinator of Dactylostenography at the other end of the wire.

"The Coordinator of Sirens to see the Coordinator of Coordination . . ."

While antiphon and response succeeded each other, the Coordinator of Sirens was delivered on an upper story by the Coordinator of Ascensions and Descensions a brunette.

A feverish atmosphere pervaded the corridors of the OCCD, for the previous night there had been an Alert. Although investigation had disclosed the fact that a zealous hilltop spotter somewhere in Maryland had, perhaps not altogether erroneously, reported a late airliner loaded with New York businessmen as approaching enemy aircraft, the news had somehow leaked into the early editions.

In the Inner Sanctum, the Coordinator of Coordination was addressing an assembly of newspapermen.

"For the facilitation of the furtheration of the dissemination of information in relation to air raids," he was saying, "such information must receive estimation and evaluation, and authorization for the propagation of the aforesaid information . . ."

"Botheration!" exclaimed a Harvard graduate as his pencil broke. He had been taking down every word in longhand. The others were thumbing pocket Websters and wearing confused expressions.

Relief showed on all faces when the Coordinator of Sirens entered.

"Gentlemen," said the Coordinator of Coordination, with the happy air of one who is about to kill several birds with a single stone, "the Coordinator of Sirens is here to conduct an experimental review of the Sirens' potentialities. Perhaps you would care to accompany him to the roof?"

"Okay, Coord.!" cried the newspapermen, and springing to their feet they marched off behind the Coordinator of Sirens.

A noise of angry wrangling halted their progress. The Coordinator of Equipment was losing his temper with a delegation of wardens.

"Some people are never satisfied!" he was shouting. "Why, only the other day I distributed embroidered armbands to every man and woman in the Warden Service, and now you want whistles!"

"But we can't whistle with armbands," pointed out the spokesman of the wardens.

"Be ingenious! Substitute! Improvise!" exclaimed the Coordinator of Equipment.

The wardens seemed unenthusiastic.

The Coordinator of Equipment lifted a receiver.

"Tell the Coordinator of Exits and Entrances to report immediately to the Coordinator of Equipment," he ordered the Coordinator of Callers.

In less time than it takes to conjugate the present indicative tense of the verb "to coordinate," the Coordinator of Exits and Entrances appeared and saluted smartly.

"Show these wardens how you would call a cab," requested the Coordinator of Equipment.

The Coordinator of Exits and Entrances placed his index and middle fingers to his lips and blew. A shrill blast shook the steel girders.

"I appoint you Coordinator of Whistling," said the Coordinator of Equipment. "Take these wardens up to the roof and give them an hour's training."

The wardens fell in behind the new Coordinator of Whistling, who fell in behind the newspapermen, and led by the Coordinator of Sirens, they proceeded to the roof.

The roof was already crowded. The Coordinator of Callisthenics, an albino, had corralled a Decontamination Squad in quest of gas masks and some auxiliary firemen who kept insisting that they really wanted buckets of sand and spades, and was coordinating them in a Virginia Reel. Near the edge of the roof, the Sirens, three redheads, were practising their scales.

"Five short high C's and one long high C. All together, now, girls!" coaxed the Coordinator of Sirens. The Sirens obliged. A crescendo of whistling from the Wardens drowned their voices.

The Sirens burst into tears.

The Coordinator of Callisthenics, the Decontamination Squad, the auxiliary firemen, and the newspapermen, who had somehow become involved in the Virginia Reel, burst into song.

"The more we are together, the merrier we will be!" they chorused. The wardens went on whistling.

"Grand Chain!" proclaimed the Coordinator of Callisthenics. The dancers joined hands and rushed in a long wavering line at the Coordinator of Sirens.

The Coordinator of Sirens retreated a step before their onrush and trod on air. Desperately he clutched at the nearest Siren, but it was too late. With the wardens' whistling still shrilling in his ears, he felt himself falling, falling . . .

"Breakfast is ready, dear," said a young defens. wife, removing the whistling kettle from the stove. A weary defense worker opened his eyes, yawned, and prepared to face another day. VOLUNTEER.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Laval

THERE HAS never been a time since the French armistice when Hitler was unable to do what he has now done with Laval. In European France he has always been able to appoint the Government. The reason why he has hitherto preferred the semi-independent government of Petain to an out-and-out Quisling government under Laval has been that he had much more to gain from he Petain regime.

LIPPMANN

WITH RESPECT to France Hitler has had two main purposes. One was to control the French empire overseas without taking the risks and paying the price of trying to cross the Mediterranean to occupy French Africa. Hitler had somehow to exercise power in territory which was beyond the easy reach of his army. Because Marshal Petain was trusted and obeyed by the French forces and by French officials in the vital North African part of the empire, the Petain regime has been an invaluable instrument for neutralizing the empire that Hitler himself could not occupy. A man like Laval could never have served this purpose. For all Frenchmen regard Laval as a Nazi agent. During this period of neutralization Hitler sought to gain the time in which to purge the French empire of Frenchmen who might wish to resist.

Hitler's other purpose was to get from the French people the maximum support and the least possible resistance. France is the only great power that Hitler has conquered, and to keep a great power in subjection while he has been fighting a world war, Hitler could not rely on brute force alone. He had to use cunning. When we see what it costs him to keep down the Norwegians, the Poles and the Serbs, it is obvious that keeping 40 million Frenchmen down was a very big order. Hitler knew it. For Hitler is no fool. He had, therefore, to set up a regime headed by someone whom the French trusted, yet someone whom he could trust not to kindle the fires of French national resistance. Marshal Petain fitted the role. The very fact that Marshal Petain is a Frenchman and a patriot, yet also a defeatist, has made it possible for Hitler to rule France with less troops and with less gestapo and firing squads.

Therefore, though Marshal Petain did not give Hitler all the help he wanted from France, he gave a good deal of help, and above all he saved Hitler the trouble, the expense and the moral consequences of having to deal with France as he deals with Poland or Norway.

THE QUESTION then is why in this spring of 1942 Hitler has felt that it is necessary to take the risk of governing France through an agent who is so deeply disliked and distrusted by the French people. The answer is certainly that the spirit of French national resistance is rising, that Hitler is unable to quell it or to appease it through Marshal Petain's half-measures, and that he feels compelled to crush the French resistance by doing in France what he has done in the other occupied countries. The use of Laval is Hitler's recognition that France does not accept the new order, of which incidentally nothing has been heard for quite a time. It is a recognition also that, even at the price of destroying all hope of inducing the French to collaborate, Hitler must urgently and immediately get a much firmer grip upon French territory and the French population.

The reason for that lies in Gen. Marshall's presence in London and all that it signifies in regard to the grand strategy of the United Nations. Hitler knows, and the Marshall mission is intended to make him know, that Britain and the United States will not stand by while he attacks Russia and the Middle East. He is going to be made to fight in the west, at some point or at many points from Norway around France to Italy and the Balkans. In this vast theater of the European war, France is the strategical key, and the fact that the French people would welcome us as liberators makes it necessary for Hitler to try to crush their spirit of resistance before we arrive.

LAVAL CAN succeed only if, after shooting or imprisoning the hidden patriotic leaders of France, he is able to convince the rest of the French people that the Americans and the British are unable to attack. The French nation will not expect us to take foolish risks, to commit ourselves to enterprises before we can consummate them. But they will expect us to take what military men call considered risks, using the attack to harass the enemy and above all to demonstrate that the United Nations are in fact united, and know that the main theater of the world war is not in the outposts or even among the jewels of archaic empire, but at the center of Nazi power. For the French people understand war, and they know quite well, besides having a vital interest in it themselves, that the war will be won or lost in Europe where the Nazis are in direct contact with the Russians, the British, and ourselves.

Hitler knows, as we know, that even the Pacific war cannot be decided from Australia or in India, or in Libya or at Suez. It will be decided where the three great powers of the United Nations are at their maximum combined strength against their most formidable enemy—that is to say in Europe. For unless and until the power of Hitler is broken, Britain, Russia, and America can exert only a fraction of their strength against Japan. And if Hitler were victorious in Europe, it would never be possible to defeat Japan; with Russia and Britain conquered, we should be left to fight alone a last ditch defense in a greater Bataan on the coasts of North America.

ANY CONFUSION of mind which may exist on this crucial point is now certain to be dispelled by the inexorable logic of circumstances. We have suffered humiliating reverses in the Pacific because for long years we have refused to see that successful resistance to Japan was not a matter of having five capital ships to Japan's three, but of forming a coalition around Japan which would include Russia, China, Britain, France, and the Netherlands. That has always been the only possible way of checking Japan easily; our own pre-Pearl Harbor war plans, based on the premises of an isolationist foreign policy, have never envisaged the possibility of defeating Japan easily or cheaply. They have always envisaged exactly such a defeat at the outset as we have suffered in the Philippines. It has never been possible for an isolationist America to restrain Japan's advance in the Far East. That is why many of us thought it unwise to challenge Japan until it was certain that Britain, and if possible also Russia, were our allies in full strength.

They could not be our allies in full strength, or even in small strength, while they were mortally threatened by Hitler's Germany. Therefore, even if Hitler did not have designs upon the Western Hemisphere, and his fifth columns prove conclusively that he has, the defeat of Hitler and the sure survival of a strong Britain and a strong Russia has been and is now more than ever our paramount interest.

Those who honestly do not see this have not thought clearly about our vital interests. Those who seek to hide this from us are, whatever their motives, doing the work of our mortal enemies.

Business At War

By Leo M. Cherne

Economic Aftermath Of Victory

This is the fifth of a series prepared by experts of the Research Institute of America.

THE WORLD will emerge from this war scarred and battered, starved and bleeding. As it licks its wounds and peace conferences seek to shorten the period of convalescence, business will be whirled up in a tornado of readjustment. The dangers of inflation, unemployment, physical and spiritual fatigue will take the place of the less subtle threats of actual combat. But perhaps we are getting ahead of the story.

CHERNE

Overconfidence is to be avoided in any undertaking. It is, because it gets in the way of maximum effort, maximum sacrifice and expenditure of the full measure of energy needed to achieve success. It is to be avoided in this war more than in most contests.

Because this is a life and death struggle, which will certainly end in the complete destruction of one or the other of two opposed ways of life, overconfidence is especially to be feared.

BUT ON the other hand, defeatism and counsels of despair are far more destructive of energy than a well-grounded conviction of ultimate victory. Certainly America and the rest of the United Nations have every reason for believing they cannot lose the war if they give their best. And so we would neglect our responsibilities if we did not give thought to the kind of world we will have, once the peace treaty has been signed. It may prove as difficult to win the peace as to win the war.

Will America stumble into peace as it stumbled into war? Will we be without plan or preparation? Will we be forced to improvise, as after the last war? If we do this, if we write a peace treaty without an adequate program for the future, we shall have lost at least half of the fruits of victory. And business will have little to look forward to other than a long desperate period of confusion and chaos, the outcome of which no man can foresee. Many responsible suggestions have already been made, and some actual steps taken, in the direction of a post-war program.

It would not be so difficult to visualize the post-war business and economic life of the nation if we knew when hostilities would end. We know that the longer the war lasts, the more difficult and hazardous will be the transition back to a peace-time economy. Many of us suspect that if it lasts as long as we think it will, the society of the future will be radically different from that with which we are familiar.

But in substantial measure this, too, is in our own hands. If we believe that we are masters of our own destiny and give that conviction practical expression in terms of planning, we may be able to achieve a world to our liking.

AMONG ALL the uncertainties, of this one thing we may be sure: War makes strange bedfellows, and out of that companionship will develop the post-war society—in its business and economic aspects as well as others. The longer the road to victory, the farther we will have traveled from familiar landmarks.

By the end of the war we will have laid down many new production patterns. Many new materials will have emerged from the laboratories. New business techniques will be crystallized.

In addition to new technologies of production, we have expanded enormously facilities for producing airplanes, guns, tanks and high explosives. Of far greater significance to the future of American business, we will have concentrated production into fewer and fewer hands. Not only that, the economic geography of the globe will have undergone a tremendous transformation. China, Australia, South Africa, India and other areas which have had little industry have been compelled by the strongest of all impulses—that of survival—to create mass-production industries. Once the need to produce the implements of war has passed, the facilities created for that purpose will be converted to production of the implements of peace.

But it should require no argument to establish that the opportunities of the future are infinitely greater than those of the past. And the only future to which business can look forward is one which will come into being with a peace treaty dictated by the United Nations.

On the home front, this treaty will mean the opportunity of serving a domestic market starved for years. In the service of Mars we will have given up new clothes, new furniture, new automobiles, tires, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, radios and other so-called durable goods and luxuries. We will have done this to provide the tanks and guns and ships required for survival.

The backlog of consumer demand will be greater than our productive facilities can fill for some time. A devastated Europe will look to our productive genius to restore shattered cities and factories. It will look to us for food and other essentials of life until such time as Europe's blasted fields can yield a fresh harvest and its destroyed factories can be replaced.

WHEN PEACE again returns we will, of course, be demobilizing our own millions. We will have the task of reconverting our own factories to civilian purposes. This will mean hardship to many individual businesses. But for American business as a whole, the peace will bring its greatest opportunity—unless we mismanage the international aspects of the peace. This country and this country alone is likely to have the supplies to bind up the wounds left by war.

Among helpful signs on the domestic front is the work of the National Resources Planning Board. Established in 1939, it is working with State organizations and municipalities to coordinate activities designed to ease the transition from war to peace. It is concerned primarily with plans for rehabilitation of men withdrawn from normal peace-time society for war purposes, military and nonmilitary. It is also concerned with plans for industry which has been converted from peace to war activity—which will mean most of industry.

Significantly, the board has outlined its objectives as follows:

"We must plan for full employment and for maintaining the national income at 100 billion dollars a year at least . . . rather than to let it slip back to 80 or 70 billion again. In other words, we shall plan to balance our national production-consumption budget at a high level with full employment, not at a low level with mass unemployment.

"We must do this without requiring work from youth who should be in school; the aged, who should be relieved if they wish it, and women who choose to make their contribution in the home, and without asking anyone to work regularly in mines, factories, transportation, or offices more than 40 hours a week or 50 weeks a year, or to sacrifice wage standards which have been set."

There are numerous other agencies working on the problems of the post-war period. But all their plans will be worthless unless a way is found to maintain the postwar income at something like the income built up during the war. The keystone of all postwar plans must be maintenance of consumer purchasing power. If demobilization day fails to make provision for putting dollars in the pockets of the millions of newly unemployed, catastrophe is sure to follow.

There are at least a dozen proposals now being studied which are designed to assist in maintaining consumer purchasing power when for the final time the bugle sounds "fall out." One example is that of unemployment insurance for those who have been in the service, to be paid following discharge from service. It would be based on earnings of the individual in the year immediately preceding the service period. Compulsory savings out of war wages is another device which would cushion the transition. Still another is a proposal for including in war contracts a provision calling for a bonus to employes when war production stops.

But more important than any of these is finding of the means of insuring full postwar employment. One of the most promising of suggestions advanced to this end is that of the accumulation of a "shelf" of great public works projects. The Federal Works Administrator, for instance, has appointed a group of 32 State directors to prepare a detailed six-year program which will call for expenditure of 25 billion dollars on capital improvements and public services.

The National Resources Planning Board is behind this project. It has recommended establishment of a revolving fund to be administered by the President for the immediate inauguration of surveys and drafting of engineering plans and specifications for selected projects. The President himself has pointed out that we are storing up a reservoir of non-defense public works which can be loosed when war production is brought to a halt.

INCREASINGLY, this concept of planning is taking hold in widely different circles of thought. Though differing in details—many of them important—businessmen educators and Government officials are calling for the application of intelligent control to what formerly were considered demons in the form of inexorable economic law to which we could only pay tribute.

There are no pat standards or blue prints which can guarantee an automatic solution of the problems which will be ours when the war ends. But it is certain that no plan can succeed unless it is based on enlightened understanding of the need for adaptation to changing social and economic facts. And perhaps more important in the long-term view is the positive necessity for international action which will, at a minimum, protect the four freedoms of the Atlantic Charter in all parts of the globe.

Only on such a foundation is there hope that men can live in peace and enjoy the plenty which industry has learned to take from the earth.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has defined the general principles on which all postwar plans probably will be based. Extreme nationalism must not again be permitted to find expression in excessive trade restrictions. Nondiscrimination in international commercial relations must be the rule so that international trade will grow and prosper. Raw materials must be available to all nations on an unrestricted scale.

The institutions and arrangements of international finance must be such as to promote essential and continuous, unimpeded development of all countries. They must permit of international payments through processes of trade which are consonant with the welfare of all nations. The lessons of the last quarter of a century should have convinced the most stubborn that economic disease in any part of the world threatens all the world.

There will be enough work in the world for all when the enormous destruction now going on comes to an end. Here in America the wheels of industry should keep right on turning, directed after the war toward life and higher standards of living rather than death and the poverties of war.

Can American industry move along that road without strong control from Government? Will it skid into a ditch unless priorities, price, labor and other controls are continued as a guide to our energies for peace as originally they were directed for war? Can those controls safely be relinquished after the victory is won?

VOLUNTARY cooperative planning among labor and industrial management could serve to replace these war controls. But it seems certain that we must expect in the postwar period at least as much regulation as the New Deal instituted, and at least a partial carry-over of many of the devices which war compelled. If the alternative to such planning is muddling and fumbling (which one may be justified in believing is the case), the price for completely unregulated business activity will be too great to pay.

Full use of our resources at the war's end to eliminate "poverty in the midst of plenty" would seem to call for a considerable amount of planning and Government control. Our enormously expanded productive plant will make the task of readjustment just that much more complex and difficult.

After the first and most difficult part of the road back to "business as usual" has been traversed, self-discipline and industry agreements, of which there are already many strong indications, may well be the dominant notes. But the early days of reconstruction will certainly find Government tightly holding the reins of business. Socialism, however, seems even more unlikely for America than a return to "the good old days." History has new adventures in store for traditional American individualism. You may be sure that the American pattern will not be seriously reversed on that point in the visible future.

Md. Minute Men Rolls Expand to 5350 Volunteers

By the Associated Press

Maryland officials said yesterday an increasing rush of volunteers had brought the Minute Men's strength to 5350.

Minute Men officers reported to Gov. O'Conor, organizer of the home guard force, that enlistments had increased particularly in the past 10 days. One official estimated the Minute Men would be 10,000 strong within a few weeks.

Many Minute Men volunteers were reported in the past week or so on the Eastern Shore. Brig. Gen. Francis Petrott, adjutant general of the Maryland State Guard and supervising the Minute Men until a commanding officer is appointed, said interest in the Minute Men was booming. Montgomery County, he said, was especially active in the force. Uniforms, some small arms and two machine guns were furnished this county's Minute Men.

Two Deny Charge Of Slaying G-Man; Trial Set Today

Abingdon, Va., April 15 (AP).—Charles J. Lovett, 21, of Philadelphia, and James Edward Testerman, 22, of Clinchburg, Va., pleaded innocent in Federal District Court here today to a charge of slaying Hubert J. Treacy, jr., 28-year-old agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as he sought to arrest them in an Abingdon cafe March 13 as Army deserters.

A jury and two alternates was selected within an hour and 20 minutes without a single venireman expressing opposition to capital punishment or admitting the formation of an opinion which would prevent impartial consideration of the case.

After hearing argument in chambers in the presence of the defendants, Judge A. D. Barksdale overruled a defense motion for a severance of the cases for trial. The jurors were sent to a hotel for the night and arrangements made for the beginning of the case at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The Once Over

He's only mildly angry
When somewhere sailors die;
He takes it without weeping
When death rides in the sky;
He seldom turns deep purple
When some great cause goes bad,
But he yells bloody murder
When golf balls can't be had.

If some sea fight goes sour
He takes it in his stride;
The loss of one more tanker
Will roll right off his hide;
He reads of wearied fighters—
The news he bravely bears.
But he goes berserk when he Cannot buy metal chairs!

III

To any far disaster
He shows he's pretty cool;
He reads of blasted cruisers
Unshaken, as a rule;
When Yankee planes are battered
No fever does he raise—
But he goes nuts when told of
A shortage of ash trays!

IV

He'll take a dreadnought's sinking
With just a feeble grunt;
He takes it rather calmly
When pig-boats win a hunt;
To bad defeats on war fronts
He modifies his ire—
But, boy, he blows his top off
When he's denied a tire.

V

If there's raw news from Vichy
He mutters "That's too bad;"
To headlines "Ceylon Blasted"
He says, "How very sad!"
When our side takes a beating
He gets a little hot—
But you should hear him when he Can't buy an iron pot!

And losses bring some pain;

Wins some campaign again;
But nothing gets his dander
Like bans on ale in tins,
On radiator covers
And vegetable bins!

Defining 'Roosevelt Haters'

I AM not certain that it is wise to recognize them at all, but my wisdom is slightly fallible, so I will take a chance today and notice persistent insinuations out of Washington and New York, and in some of the little papers published by the professional unioneers, that all citizens of our country who criticize any domestic action or policy of our Government are

"Roosevelt haters." I can speak with authority because I have expressed some opposition, but still think President Roosevelt is the strongest man among us, the fittest and, on all counts, the most logical man in the United States to carry on the task of war President and a great doer and achiever on his war record up to now. He saw war coming, realized that Adolf Hitler was determined within himself and inevitably obliged by the circumstances of his career to bring down this horror on the world, and made us prepare to meet the attack. Our preparations were insufficient, but they were far more advanced, thanks to the President's powerful persistence against the indifference and opposition of our people, than they would have been under the rule of a less energetic and determined man. He made us get ready far beyond our active willingness to do so.

For another thing, no loyal American citizen can hate the President of the United States, because he personifies, even to those who disapprove certain policies and actions of the Administration, the Government of our country. Our people elected him, knowing all facts of the situation and having heard all the arguments about the third term, which I, personally, thought was a weak issue. And I recognize, of course, that the party in power used the public funds and its extensive bureaucracy in the interests of Mr. Roosevelt's third candidacy, but even a standpat Republican must admit that it were ever thus in our country. It ain't nice, but it is one of the plain facts of our political life, and to the extent of their ingenuity and their political necessity, the Republicans before Mr. Roosevelt used the same methods. The difference was not one of principle or basic methods, but of degree.

I was one who believed gloomily as early as 1935, and against the opinion of many informed American journalists in Europe, that Hitler was determined to have war. The contrary opinion, expressed patiently and sometimes condescendingly by men who knew European statesmen as a county-seat reporter knows his local politicians, held that all this sword rattling was just power politics and that bloodshed would never come of it. Sometimes they made me feel naive, but I know they were absolutely sincere and I realize that the President in those days must have been subject to much of the same reassuring and disarming argument by honest men whose counsel, had he followed it, would have cost us much of the military and industrial fitness for war which he has wrought so far.

And, at the risk of a charge of complacency, I insist that the progress which the President has made in converting a militarily flabby Nation from the ways and mind of an unarmed, flippant, luxury-loving people, whose amusement industry was one of the most important in the land, has been a much greater achievement than most of us know. The great military cities, their air fields and their craft and buildings and many of the very factories did not exist and most of the men in uniform today did not know a corporal from a brigadier.

IF A PRESIDENT is to be criticized for his policies and errors of execution, he must also receive credit for his good works, and I believe President Roosevelt has brought us or dragged us far ahead of the military and industrial war stage which the enemy had set for us as of this time. Of course, the military people, professionals of the staff, and raw, drafted men alike, the workers, taxpayers, stockholders and plant executives, Congress and even the despised bureaucrat have had a hand in all this, but credit for accomplishment is due the chief who risks the blame for failure, and he is Mr. Roosevelt.

The indiscriminate use of the term "Roosevelt hater" cannot now arouse actual hatred of the head of our Nation in men and women to whom it is wrongfully applied with dark purpose, but neither is it likely to intimidate those who, nevertheless, opposed the President's passive encouragement of predatory and lawless political unionism and his toleration of men in Government who have committed themselves to a belief in the failure of our free life under capitalism and therefore must exert themselves in positions of influence to vindicate their expressed beliefs.

The Roosevelt haters are the Coughlinites and all their clamorous but not very numerous kind whose daggers thirst for the blood of Americans and, latently, the Communists who hated him with equal fury while Russia ran with Hitler.

Dies Plans Probe To Expose Nazi Espionage Ring Throughout U. S.

By the Associated Press

Beaumont, Tex., April 15.—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, announced today that he would begin shortly at his ranch near Jasper, Tex., a series of hearings which would "expose once and for all the entire Nazi espionage ring in this Nation."

The chairman of the House Committee Investigating Un-Americanism said his agents in the West and Southwest had informed him that they had more than 100 persons of German, Italian, Mexican, Spanish and Japanese affiliations who are willing to give private testimony about spy activities in this country.

Dies stated that the sworn testimony would be taken by himself and secretaries, printed in secret on Government presses and submitted to his committee for study. If the committee approves, the entire report will be given to the district attorney in Washington with a request for grand jury action.

Dies previously has submitted evidence to the Department of Justice.

National Symphony's Music Makers

Harpist Sylvia Meyer Won't Listen to 'Jive'

This is the second in a series of sketches on members of the National Symphony Orchestra, whose twelfth annual drive for sustaining funds is being conducted through April 25.

By Earl J. Wilson
Post Staff Writer

As modern and vibrant as her new harp, Miss Sylvia Meyer, solo harpist with the National Symphony Orchestra, has come a long way since the age of seven when her mother gave her a dilapidated (cost $3.50) harp.

Since that time Miss Meyer has practically lived with a harp, but when you meet her don't pull any old wisecracks like, "I guess, being a harpist, you'll have one jump on us when you get to heaven." She has heard them all by this time, she says.

Before she was born her mother more or less outlined her daughter's career, although it was entirely unintentional at the time. With a long-lasting love for antiques—a fact amply shown by the beautiful home of the Meyers in Georgetown—her mother one day bought an old harp.

Then later on when Miss Meyer reached the age of seven the harp was brought to light and dusted off. Her mother had suggested she study piano but her father vetoed the idea, saying "What the heck, we already have a harp."

A natice of Madison, Wisc., Miss Meyer went to the University of Wisconsin and majored in geology which her father used to teach. She was graduated a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Earlier she had studied the harp for ten years at the Holy Cross Academy.

In 1933 she joined the National Symphony Orchestra and has been with them ever since. Though music is her life she dislikes the radio and never listens to records, "even for fun," and boogie-woogie is out for her.

"When you are busy making sounds all day long," she said, "you get tired of it after a while."

On the athletic side, Miss Meyer is versatile. Golf, swimming, basketball, hiking . . . yes, indeed, and good at all of them. However, these days the best she can do is to get in a little folk dancing once or twice a week, she says. Boy friends? "I've been holding a couple at bay," the harpist smiles.

ONION QUEEN BETSY WELLER AND CORSAGE

Arbor Day At A. U.

Students and a scattering of faculty members yesterday rolled up their sleeves and slacks and dug in through a day of near-summer heat to get their American University campus all cleaned up for spring.

It was the college's annual Arbor Day, and the coeds brought out their smoothest defense "work clothes," left their jewelry on, and went to work, apparently more for fun than with any thought of their day's experience marking them as potential future farmers.

They weeded and hoed, picked up papers, and dug flower beds, and as part of their reward—plus sunburn and blistered hands—they climaxed their workout by electing an "onion queen," Betsy Weller.

Actually she elected herself, in competition with other coeds, by pulling the biggest crop of "onions" in one of the campus fields, and her crown was her own hard-won bundle of beets and onions. She holds the title for the coming year.

Gen. Hugh Johnson Militantly Personified the Blue Eagle of NRA Era

"When Johnson gets gruff, he really seems to devour you, bones and all. Even I, his superior officer, felt that way."

The words are those of Gen. John J. Pershing, referring to a young Army lieutenant who served as his judge advocate in the Mexican expedition of 1916.

They could be used again to indicate the dynamic personality of Hugh S. Johnson, hard-talking, hard-driving soldier, lawyer, economist who died yesterday of pneumonia at the Wardman Park Hotel. Johnson, who helped to frame the National Industrial Recovery Act, personified its Blue Eagle as head of the "NRA."

Tenacious, explosive, he was entrusted in crises of war and peace with momentous national responsibilities. He gave himself without stint.

Steps for mobilization of the A. E. F. in 1917 found him a captain on the Army legal staff in Washington. He administered the selective draft law with such success that within a year he was a brigadier general, aged 35. He won the Distinguished Service Medal and, what meant more to him, command of the Eighth Division. But the armistice came as he was about to embark for France.

There followed active, profitable years in private business.

Then, when more than three years of depression had challenged American ingenuity in 1933, this soldier-lawyer-economist at 50 took back to Washington his driving, resourceful intellect and energy. He had been one of Franklin D. Roosevelt's counsellors in the Presidential campaign.

Aagain in that role but without title, while Congress sat in emergency session, Johnson helped to frame the "National Industrial Recovery Act" and to get it enacted. He at once was appointed by the President as head of "NRA," the extraordinary agency created by that law.

Under it, industries were allowed to combine without regard to the antitrust laws in "codes of fair competition" which outlawed cutthroat business and child labor, and reduced the hours but raised the hourly pay of workers. The objective was to stem deflation, spread employment and increase consuming power.

The "Blue Eagle" symbolized code compliance. All businesses operating under these agreements, had the force of law, displayed the pictured eagle and were pledged to deal only with each other. That fact explained what Johnson meant when he warned, "Don't trifle with that bird! To have it taken away means a sentence of economic death!"

Month after month Johnson labored prodigally, finally effecting more than 500 codes that embraced 22 million of the Nation's 24 million industrial employes. Untold billions of capital were involved.

The NRA chief rocketed to national importance. He militantly personified the Blue Eagle. He estimated it had made three million jobs and increased purchasing power by three billion dollars a year.

For periods he dominated the Capital scene to a degree second only to the President. He was indefatigable as in wartime, spending sleepless days and nights reshaping the industrial setup and obviating several strikes, notably one which threatened the coal industry in August, 1933.

JOHNSON'S FAREWELL TO WORKERS IN 1934— With dramatic gestures, Gen. Johnson delivered his farewell address to NRA workers in the auditorium of the Commerce Building, October 1, 1934

Although he had never before made a public speech, in that strenuous year of NRA organization he made them right and left with the crackle of color and fireworks. Impatient of trains, he covered 40,000 miles by airplane, sometimes snatching sleep on the vibrating floor.

Johnson was born August 5, 1882, at Fort Scott, Kans., the son of a struggling lawyer. Bad times at the start of the nineties caused the family to head southwest over the prairie schooner trails into the territory that was to become Oklahoma. There upon those flatlands the boy was reared among frontiersmen and Indians.

He was graduated from West Point in 1903; married Helen Kilbourne in 1904; served briefly in the Philippines; received his law degree from the University of California in 1916; went into Mexico that summer with the Pershing expedition and from that duty went to the War Department legal staff—a post that he held when the United States entered the World War.

After leaving the Army in 1919, he became counsel and assistant general manager of the Moline Plow Co., Moline, Ill. He organized and was chairman of the Moline Implement Co. in 1925; but before long went to New York to do economic research for Bernard Baruch, the financier, at a salary that later exceeded $100,000 a year. It was this friend of war days who did much to bring the President and the general together in the 1932 campaign.

Taking the NRA post at a salary of only $8000, Johnson was able to rally to his aid the most experienced corps of industrial and labor leaders ever to assist the Government in time of peace.

The Johnsonian methods and personality counted heavily with the thousands who had business with NRA and with the manufacturers, workers and housewives who hung on his words. Those who came into personal contact with the administrator of the huge economic set-up met a brusque, chunky, sharp-eyed man, as likely as not with collar open, sleeves uprolled and thinning hair awry. They heard from his strident voice a picturesque vocabulary ranging from slang to poetical quotations and from Biblical simplicities to salty expletives.

He was convivial when re- the uproarious, head-back variety.

He extolled as patriots those who saw NRA through his eyes; he castigated its opponents as "tories" and "the chiseling fringe."

The Blue Eagle

Johnson's intensity and his methods made him friends and foes in the ranks of both capital and labor. He was accused of being dictatorial and saw fit to disavow personal or political ambitions.

Henry Ford did not toe the NRA line as Johnson felt he should; Clarence Darrow headed a commission that denounced NRA scathingly; the Weirton Steel Co. fought in the courts.

Johnson compromised or retreated, his partisans said, like a general, either because such a course was unavoidable or to gain a better strategic position.

When the Supreme Court declared NRA unconstitutional, Johnson already had resigned as its director and in 1934 began writing a syndicated column which became more and more critical of Administration policies.

Finally, in May of last year, came a final tiff with President Roosevelt. Then the White House announced that Johnson's reserve commission as brigadier general would not be renewed because the general was physically unfit for active duty and the War Department did not contemplate calling him.

At a press conference Johnson angrily questioned the "misleading so-called reasons" for the action. Earlier, writing President Roosevelt about the application for renewal, he stated:

"I am sure you don't like me any more and I don't blame you. But I am equally sure that you know in your heart, more confidently, perhaps, than about some other people, that in whatever you might ask me to do, I would serve you faithfully and loyally—as I have always done."

Stop Desserts, Help Spouse Regain Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

JUST like Adam, a man will eat more than his share of the apple pie his Eve bakes and then will point out that she put the temptation in his way. The persistence of the original masculine viewpoint came to my attention during a recent trip to Richmond, Va.

One of my most delightful hosts there said, over the dessert course: "Will you do the men a favor? Ask the wives not to serve such fattening desserts. We don't them. Of course," he went on reasonably as he polished off a wholesome slice of cocoanut pie, "a man will eat dessert after his wife has gone to the bother of cooking it. But he would rather not have it. If it wasn't there, he wouldn't eat it."

"Eve Tempted Me"

We came across each other again in the afternoon at a tea and he reverted to the discussion over sandwiches and cakes. As far as I could see, he wasn't putting up the slighest resistance. But he was registering a strong protest!

Nevertheless, there is something to be said for this point of view. Wives are mostly to blame when their husbands get fat—proof is that practically all men take on weight after they are married.

To be quite fair, you home makers have your side, too. You like to please your family, and they are apt to line up against you when you don't produce a sweet of some kind. Usually they begin asking with the first course what's for dessert.

But when the trend is toward overweight, this habit of taking on 300 to 500 calories in the last course is one that should be broken. There won't be many husbands volunteering to cooperate along with our Richmond acquaintance. The head of your house may balk at such tampering with his menus, but he is open to reason. Tell him these topping-off calories are directly responsible for his beltline expansion and that he can lop off an inch or two by skipping them.

Simple Desserts

To keep it from seeming like an unfinished meal, serve such low-calorie desserts as half a grapefruit, strawberries—leave the stems on and arrange in a circle about a small mound of sugar, a slice of pineapple, sliced oranges, fruit ice, grapes and cheese, or, occasionally, crackers and cheese.

You know your man better than I do and this may not be the way to tackle the dessert question. You may have to be downright firm and refuse to serve desserts but you can blame the lack of them on the sugar shortage. The sugar rationing gives you an excellent excuse for leaving off these extra calories.

However you go about it, you are doing your husband a favor by helping him to keep his calories and weight down to normal. To be a real inspiration, slim down yourself. Here is one of the special spring slimming menus to help you lose 20 pounds by summer:

Betrothal Diamonds Follow the Shape of Hands

In these days when a "long" engagement may mean a week or a year, lucky is the girl who gets an engagement diamond and a wedding band, such as the ones above. Sometimes the solitaire and band both come at the same time! This solitaire is an oblong-shaped diamond with the marriage band fitting just beneath it. (With 100,000 girls per month getting engagement rings, you may be next.)

Select 'The' Diamond Carefully Even for a Hurried Wedding

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

THE FURLOUGH wedding will be the thing this June. If the fellow is lucky enough to get ten days, the couple can do it up proud with an out-of-town honeymoon and all the trimmings. More typical, however, will be the wedding and honeymoon, all within a three-day furlough. Instead of a trip, the couple usually dodge friends and stay right in the city.

Newest in honeymoon angles we have heard is the the couple who stayed in the family house. The father was stationed away and the mother left the newlyweds in charge while "she" took the trip.

Selection Is Important

While the wedding itself may be a hurried affair, selection of the diamond ring beforehand should be a sane and sensible procedure. Next to making a down payment on new furniture, the diamond is considered to be one of the most important purchases in a young marriage.

Diamonds are generally considered a long-term investment. In this respect a good jeweler should be consulted and his advice heeded. A diamond should be selected as you would choose a dress—to conceal bad points and bring out good ones. If your hand is unshapely, by no means select a gargantuan diamond. The plainer and smaller the stone, the more impressive it will be. (And bear in mind that the largest diamonds are not always the most expensive. Real value is judged by the number of carats, the cut, the color and the clarity.)

Why They Cost

Although in a normal year about six million carats of diamonds come out of Africa, less than 25 per cent are fine enough to be cut into jewels—hence the reason for discrepancy in price. Few cut gems are fine enough to become betrothal stones. Sometimes half the weight of a good-quality gem diamond is ground away when the stone is cut and polished. So when the jeweler says "this ring is $75, but this one, which isn't any bigger, is $175," you will understand.

If your young man is along when you pick out the diamond solitaire—and he very likely will be—here is a bit of advice. Success and etiquette call for equal parts of calm, clear judgment and modest unconcern on the part of the girl. If your knowledge is sound and your steering tactics gentle, you will come off with a beautiful ring and a real value in a stone. And your fiance will have the dawning conviction that you had better manage all his money!

Eyebrow Technique

Anne Shirley, a clever hand with an eyebrow pencil, says one of the secrets of applying it naturally is the state of the point. Sharpen it to a fine point, and it will draw lines too fine for proper effect; use it too dull, and your brows will look all of a blob. Like too many things, it seems to take a happy medium. A little experiment will show you how.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Destroyed Woman's Devotion to Him, by Sordid Abuse, Physically and Verbally Inflicted, Man Is Desolate and Asks How to Redeem Himself

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am very much in love with a woman five years my senior, with whom I have been going for over two years. After we had gone together for about a year, she discovered she was expecting a child, which she didn't want, as we were not married. I wasn't making enough money to get married and, aside from that, she has never wanted any children. In the third month of pregnancy, she had a miscarriage, and I can truthfully say I don't know whether or not she brought it about.

I was so happy because of her improved spirits that I didn't ask any questions. I didn't worry or think about it any more. But since that time, we have not been the best of friends. In fact, I have beaten her, sworn at her and forced my attentions upon her. About six months ago, I embarrassed her in the presence of friends, hurting her feelings very much.

I have also accused her of things that I know are not true. Now she says she doesn't love me and doesn't want to be bothered with me any more. I have several other girl friends that I am supposed to be in love with, and an acquaintanceship with a married woman who gives me financial help when I need it. (I make $120 a month). But I am not happy with anyone except her. And I would be willing to give up all these girls for her.

She has said there is nothing I can ever do to win her back, but I keep hoping. She is always home when I call. I am almost sure there is no man in her life except me. When I go to see her, she feeds me if I am hungry and lends me money if I need it, but she is never affectionate any more. But I love her and want her love. What should I do in the circumstances? I don't expect to see her or call her again until I hear from you. R. M. D.

Cultivate Conscience; Find Meaning of Love

DEAR R. M. D.: I suppose it is your habit to think of yourself as a man—as a fully grown, normally developed, justly deserving male member of the human family. But actually, you know, you have been behaving in a subhuman manner—turning in a performance that is brainless and soulless; and that has so sickened the woman's spirit that she has lost, for the time being, the power of emotional resiliency. Without either knowing or caring what you were doing, you completely destroyed her one-time faith in your decency of character and goodness of heart—by showing yourself to be a selfish, greedy, irresponsible, two-timing, foul-mouthed bully and ingrate, who treated her devotion to you (while it lasted) as though it were an article of convenience and nothing more.

You insist that you love her,—now more than ever;—and yet, your behavior in relation to her clearly demonstrates, from first to last, that you don't know the meaning of the word; and have never experienced that beneficent emotion which (as Shakespeare said, of the quality of mercy), "is twice blest; it blesseth him that gives and him that takes." In searching for the simplest possible interpretation of love's meaning, modern psychologists have reached the conclusion that, "when the security or satisfaction of another person is as important to a man as his own security or satisfaction, a condition of love may be said to exist."

Not only are you a stranger to the meaning of love, but, worse yet, it seems, you are totally devoid of Christian moral sense, such as would have prompted you to subscribe to a decent standard of behavior in your dealings with her (and with all other women of your acquaintance, for that matter), even in the absence of genuine tenderness of feeling. To judge from your own account of your actions, your consistent, benighted attitude toward womankind so far has been knavish, scheming, predatory and thievish.

Any woman who shows a kindly or sentimental interest in you does so at the risk of having to pay dearly,—in cash, good name or peace of mind. In your calculations, she becomes an "easy mark,"—from whom you feel free to demand whatever your fancy desires, with no intention of acknowledging a debt, or repaying in like measure. Your practice of accepting money from women, for instance, is a gesture despised by every man worthy of the name. A real man, down on his luck, would suffer almost any privation, rather than "sponge" off a woman; and yet here you are, with a regular income, collecting cash hand-outs from women, as a form of tribute; playing one of them off against the other; and then wondering why your favorite in the lot has reached a point where she looks upon you with saddened contempt.

If you hope to redeem yourself in her eyes, there is only one way of doing it—and that way consists in turning over a new leaf, today, and behaving henceforth in an upright, self-respecting, godly manner, so that all men will mention your name with approval; and all women can repose warranted trust in your decency. And so that the one woman whose love you crave can know, beyond any doubting, that you cherish her "security and satisfaction" as being more important, even, than your own; and would always willingly sacrifice self-serving desires in order to safeguard or promote her comfort and well being.

If you are to set firm feet on the path of righteousness, which leads unfailingly to "the good life," and its sense of firm fellowship with loving hearts; and if you are to continue steadfastly in that course hereafter, it is all-important for you to reinforce your purpose, from the be.inning, by surrounding yourself with a better brand of association than you have known in the past. Therefore, I suggest that you launch your reformation by joining some church, and becoming one of its hardest-working members. Tell your whole sordid story of past misconduct to the minister of your choice, and ask him to help you "ge. right" with your fellowmen, by making a place for you as a contributing member of decent society.

And when you have taken that decisive, long stride forward toward true manliness,—go to this woman and ask her forgiveness for your long-time abuse, the like of which (you must assure her) she need never fear from you again. And in all your future dealings with her, make good that pledge. In so doing, you will be clearing ground for the growth of a genuine mutual love that will put to shame the base attachment that flourished earlier and brought only suffering to both. M. H.

Eye Make-up Needs Some Restraint

Wise artists know that a frame is important to the picture, but they never choose a frame so elaborate it makes the picture retreat into obscurity. Michele Morgan says you must think of this when you select your "paints" to frame your eyes. When you arch the brows too high, use too much eye shadow, pencil and mascara, the eyes look small, insignificant or—worse—sunken.

Michele says the brows should only be plucked to remove stray hairs, the shadow and pencil so light they are only an accent, the mascara used only to tip the lashes. Do this—and the eyes have it.

Churchill-Bacon Wedding Set for Next Week; St. John's Church to Be Setting

IT'LL BE AN APRIL 25 wedding for Martha Bacon and Creighton Churchill, whose engagement hit the headlines a month ago . . . The daughter of the late Robert Low Bacon, who served for a number of years in Congress, and Mrs. Bacon, of Washington and Westbury, Long Island, will become a bride at historic St. John's Church . . . Plans are not yet complete, but it has already been decided that the ceremony will take place at 4:30 p. m., and there will be a reception afterward at the Bacon home on F Street.

Martha Bacon

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Winston Churchill—but not the Prime Minister of England. Churchill, the father, is a widely-known author (remember "The Inside of the Cup?") who, with Mrs. Churchill, has long made his home at Cornish, N. H. . . . Since the British celebrity by the same name is also an author, the two have been confused in the minds of many persons for years. Despite the fact that, when the engagement announcement was made some time ago, all newspaper accounts carefully mentioned that the Winston Churchill concerned was the American author, a few people who have known Miss Bacon for years got the whole thing confused.

One well-known Washington dowager bustled up to me at a party the other day and asked me breathlessly when Martha Bacon was going to be married. "And is it true," she went on, "that Winston Churchill's coming over to America again to attend the wedding?" I told her I thought that was doubtful . . . and she was most understanding about the whole thing. "I suppose he's just too busy," she said.

RENEWING acquaintances with many Washingtonians who have known him in China, in England, in India, or in many number of other places, is Sir Victor Sassoon, who last night gathered in a number of his friends for an off-the-record dinner. Known the length and breadth of the Orient as a "taipan" or "pukka" ("Big Shot" to you and me) Sir Victor has long been acclaimed the richest white man in the Far East . . . one of the richest in the world.

Sir Victor Sassoon

Sir Victor's uncle started to develop China 60 years ago, and the nephew has kept up the good work in a manner that has made peoples around the world sit up and take notice. For years he lived alternately on his estate just outside Shanghai, and at the Cathay Hotel which he built. Long ago he became owner of the choicest sections of Shanghai's International Settlement, and his famous stable was long acclaimed the "finest east of Suez." Around 60 years old, Sir Victor is a handsome man with graying hair, a military mustache and twinkling eyes that indicate he doesn't take himself too seriously—despite the fact he is the big boss of banks, textile mills, hotels, night clubs, and countless other enterprises in England, China and India.

Best story I've ever heard about Sir Victor, however, has to do with his "temperament." As the legend goes, he took exception to the service in a Shanghai night club one night, so he stalked out; vowed never to return; and soon built one of his own—Ciro's, which speedily became known as the swankiest entertainment spot in the Orient.

FOR MONTHS—well, even longer than that—I've been laboring under the fond delusion there was at least one very lively city in the world. And I don't mean Washington. Seems everybody I've met from abroad lately has brought the report that Lisbon, Portugal, has the bars down all around, and like the traditional city standing in the shadow of a volcano, has given itself over to riotious living. Letters from one of our diplomats who recently took up residence in the Portuguese Capital indicate that nothing could be further from the truth.

"Lisbon is quiet . . . cleaner than Washington . . . about as gay as Helsinki," the letter goes on continuing to the effect that the onslaught of refugees and the cosmopolitan glamour one would expect from a world's crossroad has been "abut 1000 per cent exaggerated." Further commenting on the quietude of the place, the epistle points out that said diplomat, having arrived only a few months ago from Washington, finds the social calendar very slow indeed. "I went to only two dinners and two cocktail parties last week, and then gave one myself," the writer went on. In closing, emphasized again that Lisbon on the whole is "no gayer than Philadelphia, on a Sunday." I guess it's all in the way you look at it. Two cocktail parties and three dinners in one week sound like quite a lot to me.

PARTY PLATTER: Strictly off-the-record was the reception given yesterday by Admiral Sir Wilfred French for Free French Admiral Philippe Auboyneau; but it took place in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower Hotel, and there were about 100 guests, mostly officials . . . Carlos Davila, former Chilean Ambassador here, entertained at a dinner early this week at the St. Regis Hotel in New York for Spruille Braden, United States Ambassador to Cuba. Senoritas Luz and Paz Davila served as hostesses for their father, and guests included Cuban

Miss Phelps Is Wed in Church Rites

At an early morning nuptial mass yesterday Miss Mary Virginia Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Phelps, of Takoma Park, Md., became the bride of Ralph De Simone, of Washigton and formerly of New York.

The Rev. Richard Barron read the vows at 9:30 at Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Clayton Phelps, was gowned in embriodered tulle. The dress buttoned down the back and featured full long sleeves which tapered to points at her wrists. Her waist-length veil was caught by a pearl-trimmed coronet and she carried a bridal bouquet of white roses.

The bride's sister, Miss Lorraine Phelps, who was maid of honor, wore pink, fashioned similarly to the bride's dress. A shoulder-length veil fell from her crown of flowers, and her bouquet was of red roses.

Best man was William Lion, of Washington, and Thomas Dempsey ushered. The bride's mother, Mrs. Phelps, had chosen a navy blue and white ensemble for the occasion. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents.

When the couple left on the noon train for New York, where they will spend their honeymoon, Mrs. De Simone was wearing a teal blue suit with luggage accessories. They will make their home at 5340 Baltimore Boulevard, in Hyattsville, Md. Mr. De Simone is the son of Mrs. Anna De Simone, of New York, and the late Frank De Simone. He is with the Department of Agriculture here.

Peruvian President's Visit Is Main Topic at Party

By Patricia Grady

"HE'S coming in about two weeks!" It was on the tip of everyone's excited tongue at the "after 5:30" party at which the Naval Attache of the Peruvian Embassy, Capt. Enrique Labarthe, and Senora de Labarthe entertained yesterday in their apartment at 2301 Connecticut Avenue.

HE was none other than the President of Peru, Manuel Prado, who is scheduled to make a state visit to Washington May 3. "It will be wonderful for Latin-American relations," commented one guest when told that the Peruvian President had accepted the invitation of President Roosevelt to make an official visit to this country and to be his guest at the White House.

With President Prado so much the subject of conversation it was only natural that stories should circulate about the background and personality of the Peruvian leader. The Prado tradition it seems started back in about 1866 when Mariano Prado, the father of the incumbent President, headed a force of volunteers to defeat a Spanish invasion force seeking to regain the country that had previously won its independence. The great national hero of Peru subsequently became its President and Manuel Prado is keeping up the tradition of his father.

Senora de Labarthe Wears Navy Blue

A banker—formerly head of Peru's Federal Reserve Bank—President Prado's politics are New Dealish. After a visit in Washington he is slated for a trip to Boston before returning to his country, which is high on the list of producers of materials essential to our war effort.

But, back to the party. Senora de Labarthe, wearing white flowers on the shoulder of her floor-length frock of navy blue, greeted her guests from wherever she happened to be. Assisting her was her daughter, Senorita Teresa Labarthe, who saw that everyone met everyone else, and her son, Pedro. Pedro, a senior in the Agricultural School of Lima, is here during his summer vacation of three months. The Peruvian summer is almost at a close now, and Pedro will be heading southward to his academic studies in a few weeks.

Among the early arrivals were the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, whose daughter, Senorita Christina Michels, joined them there later in the afternoon. Mrs. Harold Holcomb, wife of Commander Holcomb, told friends that she would soon leave for a few months stay in California. Lieut. Comdr. Pedro A. Griva, the Air Attache to the Peruvian Legation, was enthusiastic about his recent tours through American defense plants. He has been in this country for three months observing our maneuvers and defense preparations.

Commander Raoul Puente, who is on special duty at Annapolis, arrived at 6 o'clock sharp on orders from his wife and gleefully awaited her own late arrival. George Abell, with the support of several service men from Latin America, started a movement to further glamourize Washington by putting all Latin American officers in uniform. Mrs. Juan Pardo, who is an American, the wife of the Assistant Commercial Counselor of Peru, spoke both English or Spanish with equal facility.

Others at the informal gathering were Mrs. Benjamin Cohen, wife of the Chilean Minister to Bolivia; the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos; the Bolivian Minister, Dr. Luis Guachalla, who told friends that his Chilean wife was still visiting in her native country; Mrs. Randolph Huntington Minor, and the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Pardo.

Diplomatic Group Well Represented

Others in the group were the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray; the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Senora de Gouthier, Admiral Carlos Rotalde, Admiral C. L. Marino, the Second Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy and Senora de Mackenhenie, the Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Elguera, the Commercial Counselor and Senora de Chavez, the Minister of Commerce of Peru, David Dasso, who is here on a special mission; Commander Allen Davenport, Eduardo Dibos, the Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Bertrand, and many, many others.

Films Shown For Yugoslav Benefit

Peggy Lane scored again yesterday, with her Technicolor film of Yugoslavia, if the Ohs and Ahs of audience were any indication. The event, which was for the benefit of "American Friends of Yugoslavia Prisoner of War Fund," was given at the spacious Yugoslav Legation on R. Street. Miss Lane, daughter of Arthur Bliss Lane, former United States Minister to Yugoslavia, took the films during her father's tour there.

A capacity audience of official, diplomatic and social Washington filled the large, gold-paneled drawing room of the legation, to see the films and later have tea. Mrs. Ernest Draper introduced Minister Ivan Soubbotich, the Yugoslav delegate to the American Red Cross, who spoke briefly. Another who told of his experiences was Flight Surgeon V. Yellich, who escaped from a German prison camp.

Mme. Fotitch, who greeted guests at the head of the stairs, was gowned in a street-length frock of a gay spring print.

After the film guests moved on to the dining room, where a well-stocked tea table was gaily adorned with two large candelabra of colorful Dresden china. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Charles McNary, Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Miss Belle Gurnee, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mrs. Thomas Burke and Miss Patria Mencia.

Salvage Drive Calls Women's Mass Meeting

Calling all women! The newly organized Women's Division of the District of Columbia Salvage for Victory Committee has called a mass meeting for women on April 21 at 8:15 p. m., in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. In addition to several entertainment features, there will be informational talks by prominent people who will emphasize the importance of salvage in the war effort, how to collect it, what is considered salvageable and where it may be disposed of.

Already the services of most of the organized women's groups in the city have been secured for the purpose of spreading the gospel of salvage, and the committee members, who are actively engaged in planning the meeting are: Mrs. Newton D. Wing, chairman of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Curtis D. Shears, vice chairman of the United Women's Organizations.

Other members include Mrs. M. E. Carroll, of the American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. William Van Vleck, of the American Association of University Women; Miss Laura Waters, of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Representing the Catholic churches and the Catholic Daughters of America are Miss Mary Mattingly and Miss Katherine Reuppert, while Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser represents the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Aid for 'War Girls' Is Mission Of Catholic Service Leader

By Genevieve Reynolds

CYNOSURES of all eyes are the soldiers in uniforms. Likely to be overlooked are the low-salaried girl defense workers huddled together in overly crowded industrial areas. It is the comfort and well-being of the latter that mostly concerns Miss Anne Sarachron Hooley, assistant director of the National Catholic Community Service.

Miss Anne S. Hooley

"Contrary to popular belief," she said, "girls in war work don't get high salaries. In fact, the majority of clerks, stenographers and factory workers make only minimum wages. And when they must live in camp or industrial areas that are crowded beyond capacity, something must be done to make their existence tolerable."

It is here that the USO centers come in, explained Miss Hooley, who spends much of her time visting the various United Service Organizations throughout the country.

In Crab Orchard, Ill., many girl warworkers sleep in three shifts on the same beds. Three girls were seen after midnight standing on the street corner listening to their portable radio. They were waiting for their roommates to vacate the beds. This is only one of the many problems that confront Miss Hooley.

Then there's the hysterical mother who hitchhiked from Illinois to San Diego, Calif., to see her son before he sailed for the Philippines. With no money or place to go, she was finally rescued by the USO in that vicinity.

Lack of home ties, no friends and desperate loneliness send many of these warworkers into "honky tonks" and into the streets in search of diversion. Living quarters are too cramped to invite friends in for normal amusements. "These are the things we must prevent," said Miss Hooley. "We must prevent these girls from getting in unwholesome and low moral surroundings."

Emphasizing the fact that the work of the USO is to prevent girls from getting into difficulties, she cited many examples of girls who were on the borderline of getting into trouble or throwing up their jobs and returning home. By finding normal friendships and recreational facilities many change their outlook and remain happily in vital wartime jobs, according to Miss Hooley, who was on the verge of hopping a plane to Florida when interviewed yesterday.

"Women of America must work together to preserve those things that we are fighting to hold," she said. "That means high morals, ideals and the maintenance of the wholesome family circle." Unless guarded and preserved they will be lost in the war turmoil, she added.

To Describe Pearl Harbor

MORE ABOUT Pearl Harbor! What's more, the actual bombing will be described by Mrs. Charles C. Gates, an eyewitness of the Nipponese attack on December 7. The occasion for the talk is the annual breakfast of the Junior Alliance, Saturday, 12:30 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel. Other guest speakers of the day will be Representative Katharine Byron and Representative Graham A. Braden.

Mrs. Glenn Spitler

Expected to attend this gala event are Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the District of Columbia League of Republican Women; Mrs. Charles A. Watkins, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, director of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Also Mrs. A. L. Howard, Mrs. Frank Birthright, Mrs. William H. Roeber, Mrs. Frank M. Steuart and Mrs. Pierre M. Bealer.

Knee deep in plans for the Alliance's gay breakfast is Mrs. Glen Spitler, chairman of arrangements, who will preside as mistress of ceremonies. Assisting her is Mrs. James O'Donnell.

Special features of the program will be a fashion show by a local store, piano selections by Mrs. J. Vergil Gaines, "Roberta," soloist of the Mayflower, will sing several popular songs. De Metris Bonus, harpist, will entertain the party with a few harp numbers.

The Junior Alliance is composed of a group of young women, who for the past few years have participated in welfare work—concentrating principaliy on underprivileged children. During the last year, however, the club has gone in heavily for National Defense avtivities. Mrs. Carlton C. Duffus is president of the organization.

Chevy Chase Women

IT WAS a busy time at the Chevy Chase Woman's Club meeting yesterday. But luncheon preceded the actual business. Mrs. Henry De Coursey Adams presided and introduced the guest speaker, Miss Melinda Alexander, international lecturer and world traveler. Scheduled to speak on "Women in the News," Miss Alexander switched to the men and gave a rip-snorting, old fashioned patriotism arousing talk.

Miss Melinda Alexander

The welfare committee—full of good works yesterday, appropriated $100 to be turned over to the Montgomery County Hospital. Then the committee on applied education, of which Mrs. William Lawrence Fulton is the chairman, awarded its annual scholarships. Miss Nancy Troth was awarded the first scholarship of the day—one to continue her college work. Miss Elizabeth Ring was given the freshman college scholarship. Miss Marjorie Tobias was chosen as Miss Ring' alternate. A special scholarship (inaugurated this year) went to Miss Margaret A. Erk. Alternate for this scholarship is Miss Betty Beckensteen.

Still in the donating mood—all for good causes—the committee presented $50 to the National Symphony Orchestra fund and $30 to the Montgomery County Scholarship fund.

The nature section held a plant sale—proceeds to go to Montgomery County Hospital.

Ordinarily the club closes shop in May for the summer. However, a vote yesterday by all the members will keep the club running through the summer. Emphasis will be on war activities.

Three officers were elected for the ensuing year. These were Mrs. Dillard B. Groff, treasurer; Mrs. J. Harold McDowell, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Edwin J. Cameron, recording secretary.

More War Workers Coming

YOU MIGHT as well stop complaining about Washington's overcrowded living quarters and congested traffic. There are still thousands of other war workers to come, according to Miss Grace Fielding, guest speaker at the labor committee luncheon of the Washington League of Women Shoppers.

At the meeting held at Taft House Inn yesterday, Miss Fielding, who is in charge of the Labor Market Study for the District, said that some kind of labor control might be a good solution to the problem. "A central agency," she said, "responsible for hiring, might help control migration."

One approach to the problem, as she sees it, is to get many people already living in the District into the labor market. That means utilizing those who have never been employed and employes who are no longer working.

D. A. R. Completes Plans for Prayer Service Sunday

Members of the Daughters of the American Revolution in all of the States have completed plans for a national service of prayer on Sunday, April 19, between the hours of 3 and 4 p. m.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, presidental general, returning to Washington today from Chicago, declared that practically all of the 2500 chapters of the national society will participate in the service and ask the protection and the blessing of God "upon our country, our President, our valiant defenders and our loved ones everywhere."

The service will commemorate the anniversary of the Battle of Lexington. At D. A. R. headquarters the service will be under the direction of Mrs. William H. Belk, of Charlotte, N. C., chaplain general. Members of Mrs. Belk's committee will assist.

Speaking of the prayer service, Mrs. Pouch said:

"On Sunday the Daughters of the American Revolution wherever they may be will ask Divine guidance and protection through the dark days which may be ahead.

"Through prayer we will gain new inspiration and courage and go forward with greater strength and determination to sure and certain victory.

"This prayer service is a fitting prelude to our coming Continental Congress to be held in Chicago at the beginning of May. There we shall reaffirm our pledge to serve our country in every way we can and to assist our Allies to the limit of our abilities that freedom and liberty shall not perish from the earth."

Hadassah Sheet Shower Slated

Mrs. Edward Cafritz, chairman of Washington Hadassah's twenty-first annual sheet shower scheduled for Tuesday, April 21, at the Jewish Community Center, will entertain her committee at her apartment in the Westchester next Monday afternoon from 3 to 5. She hopes to collect 1000 sheets, 72 by 99, or the money to buy them, at the shower for the hospitals of Palestine.

"Since Hadassah is now the official representative of the British War Relief Society in Palestine, it is partiularly important not only to continue to send supplies there, but to increase our contributions," explained Mrs. Cafritz. "Hadassah has now provided 500 beds for the allied armies in its hospitals in Palestine. Our goal is a pair of sheets for every such hospital bed."

Blood Banks To Be Built Up For Civilians

Blood banks for civilians in the coastal target areas will be built up by the medical division of the Office of Civilian Defense at selected hospitals to be named next week, the OCD announced yesterday.

A supply of at least 50,000 pints of dried plasma which will be distributed to strategically located depots is contemplated. This will be held as an emergency pool from which amounts can be rushed to any stricken community if its local supply of liquid or frozen plasma is in danger of becoming exhausted.

Dr. George Baehr, chief medical officer of OCD, said hospitals which do not have plasma banks will be selected and that money for the venture has been made available through the U. S. Public Health Service. The coastal target area is considered to be all communities within 300 miles of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and the Gulf of Mexico.

The Army and Navy, with assistance of the Red Cross, have been collecting blood and having it processed into dried plasma in commercial laboratories so that it can be shipped readily to distant posts. Availability of a good supply saved many lives at Pearl Harbor, Dr. Baehr pointed out.

The civilian program does not interfere with the collection of blood for the armed services, he stressed, but maks available "an additional reserve for military as weil as civilian casualties."

"By mutual arrangement, the OCD supplies of plasma will be available for military casualties in any community which may be under attack, and the surgeons general of the armed forces have arranged to release their supplies for civilian casualties to supplement the civilian resources in any exceptional emergency," he said.

Each hospital selected for the new collection program will be expected to accumulate within three months a reserve stock of both liquid and frozen plasma amounting to at least one pint per bed. This will be in addition to the dried plasma accumulated for storage at the scattered depots.

Civil Service Test Called

A civil service examination for stenographers and typists will be held at Richard Montgomery High School, Rockville, on Saturday. Applications may be had at the Rockville postoffice.

Court Upholds Conviction of Sect Members

The conviction of two members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect in Police Court for selling religious magazines without a license was upheld yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals.

The two men, David Busey and Orville J. Richie, were sentenced to pay $5 or spend a day in jail on April 3, 1941, but the sentence was withheld pending the outcome of their appeal. They contended they were offering the publications as a means of spreading their doctrines, not as a business enterprise, and were therefore not liable to a license tax.

Their conviction was affirmed by the appellate tribunal in a split decision, with Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Associate Justice Henry W. Edgerton asserting in the majority opinion:

"A reasonable license fee, applicable to street sellers generally, and not intended or shown to restrict the expression of any view, is valid in its application to sellers of religious magazines.

"It is not for us to say whether the license law is good for the community," the opinion continued. "It is an Act of Congress. Though it covers some sales of religious literature, it conflicts with no defensible concept of the constitutional freedom of the press or religion. We must therefore enforce it."

In a dissenting opinion, however, Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge declared that the conviction should be set aside because the acts charged were "essentially religious proselyting and distribution of religious literature, not business or commercial transactions."

Planning Board Meets Today to Study Housing

Although temporary office buildings and emergency housing are going up in Washington largely without regard to the policies and principles of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, that semiforgotten body is still trying.

It will open a two-day meeting this morning to mull over ways of spending the 50 million dollars for war housing and public utilities in the District, as authorized in the Lanham Act, and to discuss the ageless question as to whether the Capital should have a subway.

With Chairman Frederic A. Delano presiding, the planning group also will take up such recurrent items as the proposed extension of Anacostia Park into Prince Georges County, alteration of the Gallinger Hospital roadway plan and land acquisition for George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Silver Spring Blaze Destroys Old Auto Tires

A quantity of old auto tires burned yesterday in a Silver Spring (Md.) storage lot with flames and clouds of black smoke that were seen as far away as the Brightwood section of the District.

The fire broke out in the storage lot of the Silver Spring Garage & Wrecking Co., 8216 Georgia Avenue, almost directly in front of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department.

The blaze, which occurred about 6 o'clock, caused traffic congestion and raged for an hour before being extinguished. Firemen were able to keep the fire away from nearby stores.

Mrs. J. A. Taylor Rites Scheduled This Afternoon

Funeral services for Mrs. Josephine Alexander Taylor, 745 Sligo Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., who died Tuesday afternoon at Mount Alto Hospital after a short illness, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Washington Memorial Park Cemetery.

Born in Hendersonville, Tenn., Mrs. Taylor made her home in Silver Spring for nearly 25 years. In World War No. 1 she was a yeoman (F) in the Navy. She was active in social affairs of the community.

Surviving are her husband, Thomas C. Taylor, a retired Department of Agriculture employe, and a son, Capt. William C. Taylor, U. S. A., both of Silver Spring.

D. C. Entry Third In Speech Contest

Richard Forsling, 17-year-old Woodrow Wilson High School senior, won third honors yesterday in the Eastern regional American Legion oratorical contest at Buffalo, N. Y.

Forsling, who lives at 3283 Arcadia Place Northwest, was winner in both the District finals and the sectional contest at Philadelphia.

100,000 Share-Your-Car Cards Go Out to U. S. Aides Today

One hundred thousand red, white and blue cards urging participation in a voluntary "share-your-car" movement will be distributed to Federal and District employes today through their personnel officers.

The cards, issued by the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic, bear an appeal for cooperation from John Russell Young, president of the District Board of Commissioners. "To save your tires, conserve fuel and relieve downtown traffic congestion, the District Commissioners earnestly solicit your cooperation in sharing you car with others to and from work," Young declares. "These objectives have a vital bearing on our war efforts."

"Car Councils," which are drawing up maps and plans for wholesale doubling-up by employes, already have been established in the Department of Agriculture and the Office of Price Administration. Steps are being taken to extend the program to the War Production Board and Federal Works Agency under an interdepartmental council.

First Lady Denies Political Ambition

Boston, April 15 (INS).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight denied that she plans to be a candidate for Congress from the New York City district where the Roosevelts recently established a rsidence.

"There is no foundation for the report," the First Lady told reporters. "No one has ever made such a suggestion to me. I do not want to be a member of Congress."

Rumors that Mrs. Roosevelt intended to run for Congress have circulated in New York almost since the First Family established residence there weeks ago.

Blackout 'Spree' Results in $25 Fine

A defendant charged with drunkenness during Tuesday night's blackout was characterized as "a public menace" in Police Court yesterday by Judge George D. Neilson who then warned that similar offenders can expect no leniency from him in the future.

After castigating the defendant, Eugene T. Ryan, 45 years old, of Hoboken, N. J., Judge Neilson levied a $25 fine. Ryan, in attempting to defend himself, said he was preparing to "run" off the street, but the judge interpolated with the remark that he probably was in no condition to run even if real bombs had been falling.

Labor Bill Before House Group Today

A House Naval Affairs Committee showdown today on the Smith-Vinson profits-labor bill was scheduled yesterday by Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, committee chairman and co-author of the bill.

Vinson predicted a revised version of the bill will be reported to the House in time for consideration next week.

The vote will come on a substitute bill drafted by Vinson and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia. The revised measure limits profits to $6,000 plus 8 per cent on war contracts over $100,000, freezes existing open and closed shop relationships in war plants, and extends the 40-hour week to 48 hours, before payment of overtime.

Secretary of the Navy Knox and Admiral Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, have indorsed the "freezing" principle, if the same objective is not reached voluntarily. All Administration spokesmen appearing before the committee have opposed suspension of the 40-hour week.

Dog's Exemplary Deportment Wins Him Court Exoneration

The exemplary deportment of a black cocker spaniel in Police Court yesterday won the animal exoneration from charges of disturbing the neighborhood by excessive barking.

For three hours, while awaiting his turn before the bench, "Nickey" sat unheard and even unseen next to his 10-year-old mistress, Isabelle Travers, 3103 Eighteenth Street Northwest—both wide-eyed and obviously impressed with the course of justice.

Finally, the clerk of the court, in stentorian voice, read the complaint, made out by Mrs. Mary Fannon, 3105 Eighteenth Street Northwest. And as young Isabelle's aunt, Miss Helen Jordan, proceeded to the witness stand, along came "Nickey," indicating by plaintive glance that he wanted to share the witness chair.

While Miss Jordan extolled the canin's gentlemanliness and good manners, Judge George D. Neilson quizzically eyed the dog, saying nothing. Then an affidavit was presented from a bedridden neighbor, Mrs. C. E. Warner, 3101 Eighteenth Street Northwest, who declared: "Watching the dog play with the little girl is an inspiration and an aid to the recovery of my health."

At this point, Judge Neilson dismissed the case, stating that the dog's behavior in court was mute but effective testimony. And further, the judge added with significant emphasis, "Laws were made not only for people with nervous temperaments who don't like dogs, but also for people who do like dogs."

Australian Justice May Come to U. S.

Canberra, Australia (Thursday), April 16 (AP).—Sir Owen Dixon, justice of the high court in Australia, has been invited to become Australian Minister to the United States, it was understood today.

Sir Owen, 55, has bten justice of the high court since 1929. He is married and has two sons and two daughters. He was acting judge of the Supreme Court of the State of Victoria in 1926.

Citizens Group Seeks Traffic Improvement

The Friendship Citizens Association last night moved to seek facilitation of traffic at Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues Northwest, particularly in regard to streetcars.

Meeting at Janney School, Wisconsin Avenue and Albemarle Street Northwest, the association instructed a committee to take the matter up with the police department.

The organizations traffic committee reported that its objections against a ban on parking on Wisconsin Avenue between Albemarle and Brandywine Streets had resulted in abolition of the restriction except during rush hours.

Chevy Chase Citizens

The Citizens Association of Chevy Chase held its regular monthly meeting last night in the E. V. Brown School, featuring a sound and color film entitled "Our Neighbor Down the Road," which depicted the new lower half of the Americas Highway. A number of representatives from the South and Central American embassies and legations attended.

The meeting presided over by Herman V. Schreiber, president, was preceded by selections offered by the Woodrow Wilson High School Band. Chief business of the meeting concerned reports by deputy air-raid Warden Charles C. Sellers, who told of 100 per cent cooperation in Tuesday's blackout throughout the Chevy Chase area and a record total of 560 defense workers for the area, and J. M. Heiser, chairman of the finance committee, who announced a Victory dinner-dance and card party to be held on May 7 in the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, proceeds to be given over for the purchase of defense equipment for the area.

Mrs. Marion Carpenter, secretary, reported that 69 new applications for membership had been received, bringing the total of members in the association to well over 2300.

New Speed Limit To Be Enforced, Va. Drivers Told

Richmond, Va., April 15 (AP).—Col. M. S. Battle, director of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, said today that the new speed limits which become effective Friday under an act of the 1942 General Assembly, will be "enforced rigidly" by State police.

The new law restricts passenger automobiles and motorcycles to a maximum speed of 45 miles per hour, passenger buses to 45 miles per hour, and trucks and school buses to 35 miles per hour.

Motorists should drive even slower than the limits the law allows on the open highways, because many tires thus would be usable longer than otherwise, the director said, adding that "if drivers will operate at a lower rate of speed, they will not only conserve their tires but will prevent many serious accidents."

FALSE TEETH
Need Not Embarrass
Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

OEM Considers Vast Decentralization Plan

Office of Emergency Management, the parent of a score of new war agencies, has under consideration a vast decentralization plan that would move some of the offices here to New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, and possibly Cleveland. Space surveys are now being made in all of these cities. A decision on decentralization will be made when estimates are made on the numbers of new employes to be hired during the next year. The number will be huge, it's anticipated, as the Office of Price Administration alone must hire thousands—some estimate up to 25,000 — if overall price control is voted.

But some form of decentralization will take place regardless. That much has been settled. The question is merely what form it will take. Two proposals under consideration are (1) the actual transfer of entire agencies out of Washington, and (2) the gradual building up of field offices, and the delegation of more responsibility to the field. The actual result probably will be a combination of the two.

The most pressing field problem at the moment is in New York City. OEM now has offices in the Channin Building, where War Production Board, Office of Civilian Defense, Office of Information, and the Transportation Coordinator among others have offices. It's being proposed that these offices not only be expanded but also that several entire divisions here be sent to New York. As OEM has about all the space it can get in the Channin Building negotiations are under way to take over several floors of the Empire State Building.

Maritime Commission has finally decided to set up a regional office in Baltimore. It was intended originally to establish the office there but when no space could be found it was decided to shift the office to Philadelphia. Now, however, Home Owners Loan Corporation has consented to close its Baltimore office and merge it with the New York office. Its space in the Equitable Building will be turned over to Maritime. Incidentally, the Maritime office will be somewhat larger than was planned. Instead of 100 employes, it will have around 400. The move will be made May 30. J. F. McInnis, of Washington, will head up the new office.

Efficiency Rating

War agencies will win the fight over the new efficiency rating system. Civil Service Commission today will grant the request of the war agencies for a simplification of the system. It won't be necessary, for example, for war supervisors individually to check each of 31 different questions for each employe. Instead, an employe will be given an over-all rating, but the supervisor must be prepared to defend that rating if it's appealed. An average of 30 minutes is required to rate an employe and war agencies have complained they can't take the time to do justice to the job.

Interim ratings won't be required of war agencies under the plan now being considered. Some of the old-line agencies also have asked for a simplification of the procedure and it's possible that the new plan will be made optional for all agencies. Efficiency ratings are more important this year than ever as administrative promotions are tied in with the system.

Federal workers living in Bladensburg, Md., can now participate in local politics . . . Several hundred Railroad Retirement Board employes are moving to Chicago today. More will be moved next week . . . Census Bureau is moving dead storage to its new building at Suitland, Md. No employes will be moved until transportation is provided . . . Civil Service Commission has orders for more than 1800 typists and stenographers. It hasn't been able to fill al lthe orders . . . There are 7446 eligibles on the printers' assistant test . . . Agriculture press agents were ordered yesterday to reduce their output drastically. The order came from the Budget Bureau.

Not That Bad!

Annapolis, Md., April 15 (AP).—City council approves of victory gardens—but not in the streets.

The council ordered gardens planted in beds along a boulevard removed.

"Things are not so bad that it is necessary to use city streets for victory gardens," said Alderman Jesse A. Fisher.

Just an Added Touch!

Passaic, N. J., April 15 (AP).—Thieves broke into the garage of Elliot Champman, jacked up his automobile and removed all four tires and wheels. And did they stop at that? They did not! They also carried off the bicycle he was saving to use when his tires wore out.

Funds Asked For War Housing Here

50 Million Sought For Federal Workers; President Increases Record Budget

The huge housing program for Federal war workers in the District area will move a step nearer reality today as the House Appropriations Committee receives a 50-million-dollar appropriation bill to carry out plans already authorized by Congress.

At the same time President Roosevelt sent the request to Capitol Hill yesterday, he officially asked Congress for $2,046,278 more for the District budget in the 1943 fiscal year, raising the total amount for the year beginning July 1 to $56,594,840.

Largest Budget Ever

Largest amount ever requested for the National Capital area, the total of more than 100 million dollars represents the Federal Government's answer to the war-induced population increase and the subsequent pressure on private and community facilities.

Swift Congresional action is expected on the housing appropriation bill which authorizes 30 million dollars for single and dormitory dwelling units and 20 millions for such public works as streets, sewers, waterworks, hospitals and schools.

All housing construction will be carried out by the National Housing Agency, with 10 million dollars of the 30 millions to be allocated from the President's emergency fund granted him in the 1492 Independent Offices Appropriatoin Act.

The Federal Works Agency will administer the 20 millions for public works, with the provision that not more than $900,000 is to be used for administrative expenditures.

Hearings Continue

Meanwhile a House Appropriations Subcommittee is continuing its hearings on the District budget under the chairmanship of Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas. The hearings are expected to continue through next week.

Chief among the supplemental items requested for the local budget is an addition of $1,001,100 for the highway fund. After deleting 16 proposed street paving items, the Budget Bureau in its revised estimates requested one million dollars for beginning construction of a bridge across the Anacostia River at the foot of South Capitol Street.

Bridge Completion Authorized

An additional $4,500,000 in contract authorization to complete the bridge also was authorized.

For studies and surveys of proposed highway improvement projects in the District $150,000 was requested. The projects, all part of the Whitehurst highway plan, are:

1. A trunk highway from the vicinity of Twelfth and K Streets Northwest to Fifteenth Street and Benning Road Northeast.
2. A trunk highway from Connecticut Avenue and K Street to Twenty-seventh and K Streets Northwest.
3. A grade separation at Thirteenth and H Streets Northwest.
4. A grade separation at Dupont Circle.

A total of $16,200 was requested for the new Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, created under the recently signed Off Street Parking Act.

For the new Municipal Court of Appeals, recently created, $40,000 was requested, of which $8000 is to be made available immediately.

A 36-inch watermain from Second and C Streets to C Street and Kentucky Avenue Southeast and from Eleventh and East Capitol Streets to Eleventh and C and Kentucky and Potomac Avenues Southeast was asked at a cost of $250,000. It will take the place of a $288,000 project which would have built a 24-inch main from the Anacostia Reservoir to Alabama and Nicholas Avenues Southeast.

An increase of $60,000 in police and firemen's relief funds was requested, and in the Fire Department salary raises from a total of $2,172,060 to $2,229,060 were asked.

Health Department Booth Asked

In the Health Department supplemental requests for additional medical services totaled approximately $195,000, while additional inspection services costing about $60,000 were asked. Supplemental items also included funds for improvements and upkeep at Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanitarium.

Because of additional expenses at the District Workhouse and Reformatory the Budget Bureau raised its estimate from $499,450 to $579,450. Other Public Welfare agencies would receive increased appropriations totaling about $50,000.

Cuts as well as raises were recommended, particularly in the public schools and public library.

Teachers' salaries would be reduced $10,500, administrative salaries, $3417, and equipment replacement, $18,000.

Salary reductions of $27,360 and $15,000 for books and periodicals were proposed for the public library.

Lottery Promoter Seeks Release on Habeas Corpus

Thurman R. Rigdon, 49, convicted by a Rockville, Md., jury March 27 on a lottery charge arising out of a scheme for raffling off defense bonds and stamps, yesterday asked for his release from the Rockville jail under a writ of habeas corpus in a petition to Chief Judge Edward S. Delaplaine of the Frederick County Circuit Court.

Judge Delaplaine issued an order directing Sheriff H. Leslie Catlin of Montgomery County to have Rigdon appear in Frederick Circuit Court tomorrow at 11 a. m.

In the petition for the writ, filed by Attorney Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, Ridgon claims he is being unlawfully held because the indictment on which he was convicted did not have the indorsement of all the witnesses who testified before the grand jury.

Rigdon is being held at the Rockville jail pending his transfer to the Maryland House of Correction for a two-year sentence. He also was fined $1000.

Seeds Reported 25 to 50% Less; Prices Booming

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., April 15.—Although there is no dire shortage of seeds in this section, inquiry today revealed that the supply of certain varieties is from 25 to 50 per cent less than a year ago, while prices in some cases are twice as high.

Most difficult to secure are carrot, kale some varieties of tomato and cabbage, and cauliflower. Onion seed can be obtained but the price is 100 per cent above that of a year ago.

There is a scarcity of some field seeds, among them orchard grass, which is said to have been exported in quantity and which is selling here for $4 a bushel, compared to $2 paid last spring.

Farmers are having no difficulty in securing fertilizers, with the exception of nitrates, which are Government controlled because of the necessity of using them for munitions.

'Army' Girl's Diploma Plea Denied

Colonel's Daughter, Now in California, Must Finish There; Cadets Lose Rifles

Sentiment had to give ground yesterday to "sound administrative procedure" in a meeting of the Board of Education. Consequently an Army officer's daughter may have to be satisfied with a Los Angeles high school diploma, rather than one from Washington's Western High.

This is the unusual case:

Last fall Miss Mary Gibson entered Western for her senior year, expecting to be graduated from there in June. She had earned her previous high school credits in Richmond, Va.

In midyear her officer father was transferred to the West Coast, and Mary went along, transferring to a Los Angeles school. Yesterday, at the board meeting, School Superintendent Frank W. Ballou reported the receipt of a telegram from the elder Gibson, requesting Western High School to grant his daughter a diploma in June.

Although a regulation requires at least one year's attendance for a diploma, Dr. Ballou recommended that it be waived, pointing out that many officers' children attend Western and covet that school's sheepskins.

But Robert A. Maurer, board member, interposed that it seemed illogical for a Washington school to give a diploma to a student who was completing her public school elsewhere after having taken only one semester's work here.

"Sentiment," he said, "should not stand in the way of sound administrative procedure."

The school board wound up by directing Dr. Ballou to write Los Angeles and ask if it won't waive its one-year residence rule, similar to the District's, and grant Miss Gibson her diploma. At its next meeting on May 6 the board will receive a report from Dr. Ballou.

Without a dissenting vote, the board approved the superintendent's recommendation that the one-year regulation be relaxed so that Herbert Alexander Hudson may get his diploma from Central High School in June.

The youth moved here last winter from New York and entered Central in February for his final term's work. Recently he joined the Marine Corps, hoping to become a flying cadet. However, a complete high school education is a prerequisite, so young Hudson's induction was deferred while he finished his school work.

Under regulations, he would have had to take a semester course next fall in order to satisfy the one-year attendance rule. The board's action yesterday makes this unnecessary.

The board also:

Authorized Dr. Ballou to act on a request that Stuart, Powell, Randall and Garnet-Patterson Junior High Schools be designated as play and protection centers for elementary pupils whose mothers are filling wartime jobs. Application for such use was made by the Child Care and Protection Committee, Civilian Mobilization Division.

Approved a survey of machine tools in use in the public schools, as requested by the United States Office of Education.

Authorized establishment of a six-weeks' summer course of intensive training in physics, mathematics and physical education for prospective aviators. June graduates and students who had dropped out of school during the previous scholastic year would be eligible for enrollment.

Dr. Ballou reported that the War Department has recalled the 2700 rifles which it has on loan to the student cadet corps. They need not be returned, however, until June 15, which means they will be available for the competitive drill to be held in May.

Bishop Freeman Pays Tribute To Memory of Rev. McKim

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday paid tribute to the Rev. Dr. Randolph Harrison McKim, former rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, upon the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of his birth, Dr. McKim died July 15, 1920.

The bishop sent a wreath to the church to be placed on the bronze bust of Dr. McKim, and later in the day issued a statement praising the cleric, who was Epiphany rector from 1887 to 1920. Bishop Freeman was rector there from 1921 to 1924.

"I regard Dr. McKim as one of the greatest outstanding presbyters of his generation, a man of great intellectual gifts, a preacher of much power, of strong convictions and pronounced judgments," said the prelate. He added:

"I was associated with him for many years in General Convention and counted it a privilege to follow him as rector of Epiphany Church."

Adolf Torovsky, organist and choirmaster of Epiphany Church, yesterday at noon played several of Dr. McKim's hymn favorites on the McKim Memorial Tower Chimes which are heard daily amid the hubbub of downtown business life. The selections included "Lead, Kindly Light;" "Stand Up for Jesus;" "Just As I Am Without One Plea," and others.

Dr. McKim was born in Baltimore, Md., April 15, 1842. He was graduated from the University of Virginia in June, 1861, when he entered the Confederate Army, remaining a year as chaplain. He studied for the ministry at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria; was ordained to the diaconate in 1864 and advanced to the priesthood in 1866.

He served pulpits in St. John's Church, Portsmouth; Christ Church, Alexandria; Holy Trinity, New York City, and Holy Trinity, New Orleans. He was president of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies for three terms—from 1904 to 1910, and was a member of the Episcopal Board of Missions and of the Virginia Theological Seminary Board.

Deadline Taxpayers Jam Office

115,000 Residents File Income Returns; Assessor Expects Record Collection

Not since Rosalind Russell visited the District Building in January has such a crowd gathered there as last night when last-minute income tax payers poured in to beat the fine for late returns.

Weary clerks worked long past 9 o'clock when the last bit of help was supposed to be given the last laggard tax-payer. The score of Tax Department employes, who had been taken off other jobs to man the information tables in the first floor lobby, helped a record number of people fill in their returns this year.

Tomorrow, the clerks will start opening the mail, which for the past week has been dumped into the vaults until last night's 12 o'clock deadline was over.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent reported that although the returns will not possibly be tabulated for several weeks, he is confident that this year's tax receipts will far exceed any the District has ever collected. Over 115,000 District residents are expected to have filed returns by last night.

The fine for persons domiciled in the District on the December 31, 1941, who did not file a return by last night is 25 per cent of the next tax, plus 1 per cent interest if the delay is continued.

It could happen in Brooklyn. With the Dodgers leading in the stretch on opening day, the Giants demanded, of all things, a saliva test. Johnny Allen, Dodgers's relief pitcher, was throwing spit-balls in the eighth inning, which is very much against the rules, the Giants squawked. Allen's two best pitches, Manager Mel Ott said, were his dust-off ball and his spitter. But he couldn't prove it, and the objection was disallowed.

POVICH

The Giants were echoing a complaint heard against Allen when he was an American Leaguer with the Indians. American Leaguers didn't like Allen's habit of moistening his glove. Saliva on a pitched ball makes it do funny things and the trick was outlawed more than 20 years ago. But no umpire ever caught Allen in the act of using a spitter, if he did use it. Anyway, umpires have a notorious reluctance to act on such complaints beyond shaking a warning finger.

For years in the American League it was suspected that Rube Walberg's habit of mopping his perspiring brow with his pitching hand was more than a tired gesture on a hot day. The moisture thusly collected would serve very well for spit-ball purposes and technically Walberg was violating no rule. But his pitches would do strange antics, a la the spit-ball, and he was regarded with very much suspicion whenever he went into his brow-mopping act.

The efficacy of the spit-ball was demonstrated to Washington players of this generation in the Nats' training camp in February. Bucky Harris used nothing more than the new tangled pitching machine that released the ball plateward from finger-like claws. A dash of saliva on the claws of the contraption and the ball it pitched wabbled, dipped and otherwise slid away from the batter.

The sign-stealing genius of the Detroit Tigers is not Manager Del Baker who has long been reputed to be the master of the art, but Tigers Coach Mervin Shea, according to Buck Newsom who spent three years with Detroit. "Shea can steal more signs in one ball game than Baker can in a week," declares Newsom. "He's the champion."

The sign-stealing habits of the Tigers so annoyed Bob Feller early last season that he felt compelled to make more than a veiled threat as to what might happen if Detroit coaches continued to tip batters off to his pitches. "I won't be responsible," said Feller, "if they guess wrong and somebody gets hit in the head with my fast ball." The inference was, of course, that Feller would be strongly tempted to deliberately cross up a sign-stealing coach and with a batter looking for a curve ball throw a high fast one inside and hold himself blameless for the result. That threat worked very well.

Feller was admitting that he wasn't clever enough to conceal his pitches, and few pitchers are. Some clubs, however, don't go in for that sort of sign-stealing for fear they may guess wrong and have a fatality on their hands. After he was nearly beaned a dozen times, Hank Greenberg begged Baker and Shea to quit trying to help him hit. "We used to have our own signals," said Hank. "When Baker or Shea would yell 'Attaboy' or 'Come On,' it was supposed to be a fast ball. Whenever they used my name like 'Come on, Hank,' they were telling me it was a curve. They guessed wrong so many times I made 'em quit."

Lou Boudreau, rookie manager of the Indians, has the good wishes of Bucky Harris and the sympathy also. "It is fun breaking in as manager of a big league club, but at the same time Boudreau is taking on a lot of worries. The biggest of them is pitching," says Harris, who in 1924 was baseball's youngest manager. "A young manager's biggest worry is not which pitcher to start, but when to take a pitcher out," says Harris. "If he makes a few mistakes early in the season, his confidence in his own judgment is going to suffer and that makes it more tough on a young manager. The old confidence can seep out of a fellow pretty quickly if he doesn't have any luck with his pitching strategy.

"I was lucky enough to have pitchers like Johnson, Zachary and Mogridge around when I broke in as a manager and I wasn't on the spot too much. But Boudreau, with Feller not around, doesn't have that kind of a staff and he can run into plenty of trouble. It could drive a young fellow nuts. If he wants to sleep nights, he'd better pray for some pitchers who can go the route."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 15.—Hard to forget will be the sight of old Carl Hubbell walking that "last mile" at the Polo Grounds to his shower.

He should never have started that opening game for the Giants. He had pitched only 15 innings all spring, and had not worked since he pitched two innings on April 2. "I never tried such a thing in my life," Hub said quietly, as he sat in the dugout before it was time to go out there.

And yet he was keen to go—keen because he felt that somehow he'd get away with it, for Mel. Mel Ott, his roommate for years, was making his debut as manager of the Giants. Hub had been around almost as long as Mel had, and, in the back of his head, he must have thought idly of becoming manager of the Giants. All ball players think of that. But, more than any other player, Hub was pleased when Mel got the job. They were, and are, buddies. Have been since old John McGraw brought Hub from Detroit 15 years ago.

Hub wanted to win that opening game more than he ever wanted to win a game. Ball players never know when they've lost their stuff, or when they haven't got it handy. If they know, they overcome the thought with memories of what they were, or how they worked when they had it. That was Hub, before the gong sounded. If he could get Mel off on the right foot, well, that would be the kind of break Mel deserved. That would be a kind of present to his pal in baseball.

There was hope and high endeavor on his first few pitches, two great strikes that snaked past Peewee Reese and another that the kid, who was in knee pants when Hub was a seasoned master, should have swung on—but didn't.

Reese Picks One Out—for Double

And then the kid, trying to make good as hard as old Hub was—for his pretty bride was in the stands, praying for him to do well against Hub—saw one he liked. He walloped it down the third base line past Bill Werber for a double. And old Hub knew that the incredible arm that once mowed down Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in succession, was not right.

Before that first inning was over, the Dodgers had scored four runs. It would have been kinder, maybe, if Mel had taken him out. But you knew he wouldn't. That it wouldn't have been right. It's a game . . . it's a business . . . but when a man feels the things that Ott feels for Hub, and Hub for Ott, he can't walk in from his position and say, "You're through."

And yet Ott had to make up his mind, in the fourth. The same kid, Reese, had hit a home run—only the eighth of his career—and had put the Dodgers ahead, 6-0.

A pitcher like Hub must not be subjected to mortification. Punishment? Sure, for there is always a chance that he can pitch his way out of it. But mortification? No. There's too much behind him; too many really glorious things, as sports go. There is a point beyond which the working of a great player is cruel. So Ott came in. The two men didn't say much. Words are trite when men are as close as Hub and Mel. A look . . . a gesture. That's enough.

Hub Is Cheered Every Step of Way

So Hub turned away from the mound, after giving the ball to Mel, and he started that eternity of steps toward the center field locker room. And the great crowd, sensing what had happened, sensing the rather brave thing Hub had tried and failed at, stood up and cheered the old guy as he trudged along.

Hub was the picture of defeat, the symbol of a man who had tried to do something for another man, a friend of many years, and had failed. It was too much to ask of an old arm, an arm that had snapped once too often and was as unprepared for the enemy as any brave salient attacked in this war.

But he tried so hard and, sitting upstairs, you looked at him and wished until it hurt that he could have recaptured a trace of the wizardry that had made him great. It would have been a great day for Hub and Ott. In fact, it was—for we, for one, will never forget how Hub tried. To us, it was as overwhelming a scene in sports as some of the miraculous deeds of bygone years, when he had it.

Municipal Stadium In Cleveland Gets Other Game July 7; Details Approved

By the Associated Press

New York, April 16.—Baseball fired a double-barreled salvo in support of the Nation's war effort today as Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and the advisory council worked out some of the plans for the two big All-Star games next July and two clubs, the Giants and Dodgers, announced the setting aside of two games for Army and Navy charities.

The All-Star shows were assigned to the Polo Grounds in New York for Monday, July 6, and to Cleveland's mammoth Municipal Stadium for July 7—and in an effort to get the greatest possible turnout both affairs were scheduled as night games.

There is a good chance that the second contest will be played between a combined major league All-Star squad and a team of standout players now in the armed services.

Second Game Indefinite

Leslie M. O'Connor, secretary of baseball, who announced the results of Landis' meeting with Presidents Ford Frick of the National League and Will Harridge of the American League, said no arrangements for the second game except its place and date had been decided upon.

But in reply to a question whether it might involve a service team O'Connor said, "I can only tell you that we are meeting again tomorrow and that representatives of both the Army and Navy will be present at that time."

Both games will start at 9 p. m. Eastern Time. In case of bad weather either or both games may be postponed one night.

The first all-star session originally was awarded to Brooklyn, but the council transferred it to the Polo Grounds today because the Giants' Park seats more than 55,000, compared to 35,000 at Ebbets Field.

The usual prices will be doubled for the contest, scaling from $4.40 downward, and it is anticipated that the game will produce more than $100,000 for the baseball equipment fund which furnishes bats, balls and baseball paraphernalia to the Army and Navy camps.

All clubs must be represented on the squads of 25 players to be chosen by the managers in each league and all clubs will pay the expenses of their players selected.

War Stamp Included

Plans for the second game call for retaining the regular season prices, but to require the purchase of a $1 war savings stamp along with each ticket. The Cleveland Stadium will hold approximately 80,000 persons. The returns from this game also have been earmarked for the bat and ball fund.

The New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers are going to give the entire proceeds of two of their games with each other to Army and Navy relief.

The clubs made a joint announcement today that all returns of the regularly scheduled National League encounter at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn on Friday, May 7, would go to the Navy Relief Society, and all receipts from the game between the two teams at the Polo Grounds in New York Monday, August 3, would go to Army Emergency Relief.

Clark Griffith said last night he had been pressing the American League for action along the same lines, playing games with all proceeds to relief organizations, and that he expected an announcement soon. Griffith was surprised at the announcement by the Giants and Dodgers, as he expected a joint release by both leagues with all dates and arrangements settled.

York's Homer, Trout's Hurling Beat Tribe, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 15.—The Detroit Tilgers squared the new baseball season's first series with the Cleveland Indians by capturing a 6-to-2 decision today behind the seven-hit pitching of Paul (Dizzy) Trout and Rudy York's two-run homer in the fifth inning featured an 11-hit Detroit attack off three Tribe pitchers.

Trout, never a consistent winner in his three previous American League seasons, but always considered valuable mound talent, limited the Indians to one extra base hit, Catcher Otto Denning's double in the ninth, and stayed out of serious trouble practically all the way.

No Reason Given for Departure of Woods, Plozay and Hamberg; Others Flunk Out

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 15.—Three-fourths of Navy's 1942 football backfield went overboard today with the announcement three standout players have resigned as Naval Academy midshipmen.

The resignjng men, all considered first stringers by Lieut. Comdr. John E. Whelchel, middie coach, were Robert E. (Bob) Woods of Corning, N. Y.; Charles A. (Casey) Plozay of McKeesport, Pa., and Harold Adolph Hamberg, of Lonoke, Ark.

The academy also said several varsity linemen, products of last year's plebe squad, failed to survive the March examinations. Their names were not disclosed but it was reported unofficially that at least two had clinched varsity berths.

Running mate of "Barnacle Bill" Busik, Navy's star 1941 left halfback, Woods had been counted to carry the brunt of the Middies' attack next fall. Hamberg, former Arkansas University passing star, was regarded as the potential right halfback, while Plozay, Cameron's understudy last season when the captain played fullback, had few rivals for the berth, Whelchel said.

The coach reported he already has started searching for replacements but said he was not ready to make any committments.

SunAgain Tops Whirlaway At Keeneland

By the Associated Press

Keeneland, Ky., April 15.—Warren Wright's Calumet Stable finally uncovered its 1942 Derby hand today as Sun Again raced to an impressive victory in the Sesquicentennial Handicap. And just to prove that his challenge is a serious one the prepossessing son of Sun Teddy-Hug Again led home the mighty Whirlaway, the stable's 1941 winner of the Churchill Downs classic.

Sun Again, under the alert handling of Jockey Wendell Eads, took the lead at the outset of the six-furlong spin, alternated the early pace with W. A. Hanger's Harvard Square and after disposing of the latter had enough left to withstand the belated challenge of his more illustrious stablemate.

Whirlaway, beaten a half length, came from far back to nip the tirnig Harvard Square by a neck at the wire. Disappointment of the race was E. R. Bradley's Derby candidate, Bless Me, which finished fourth but not disgraced.

The Calumet entry of Sun Again and Whirlaway was prohibitive choice in the betting, paying $3 for $2.

Dobson Hurls Bosox to 3-1 Win Over A's

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 15.—Righthander Joe Dobson, who wound up his 1941 season with seven consecutive triumphs, started up in impressive fashion today by hurling the Boston Red Sox to a 3-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics with a six-hit performance.

Capt. Jimmy Foxx, who shared the day's batting honors with Dom DiMaggio, scored two of the Sockers' runs against Roger Wolff, who went the full distance for the visitors.

Foxx's single, an infield out, and Pete Fox's safety provided the first Boston run in the sixth inning, but during the first of the next frame, Lou Blair, the A's rookie third baseman, clubbed Dobson for a homer to tie the score.

The Sockers clinched the game in the eighth by driving in two runs on a pass to Ted Williams, who went hitless, Foxx's third single of the game, Skeeter Newsome's successful bunt and an infield out by Catcher Bill Conroy.

Yanks Pound Buck to Take 9-3 Contest

DiMag Bounces One Over Bleachers, Gets Double and Single; Vernon Is Star

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Outslugging Mickey Vernon, the Yankees beat the Nats yesterday, 9 to 3.

Vernon drove in all of the Nats' runs with a two-bagger and single but he was overpowered by the Yankee ensemble which featured Joe DiMaggio teeing off against the pitching of Buck Newsom.

Newsom was definitely no success in his reappearance in a Washington uniform of a four-year absence. He pitched three innings of hitless ball and then the Yankees caved him in with a three-run assault in the fourth, which was a warm-up for their four-run bombardment in the next inning.

They hit everyhing Newsom threw up there except the dirty looks.

Joe DiMaggio, an old Newsom tormentor, virtually claimed big Buck for his very own. He touched Newsom up for one of the longest home runs ever hit in Griffith Stadium and found time also to swat another Newsom pitch for a two-bagger. DiMaggio made only three hits during the afternoon and drove in only five runs.

Nats Get 11 Hits

Against Spud Chandler, the Nats' hitting improved off their 3-hit effort against Red Ruffing on opening day, but they were hopelessly behind after the Yankees had finished off Newsom in the fifth inning, by which time the score read: 7-1. They socked Chandler for 11 hits in contrast to the Yankees' 13, but their blows lacked the authority of the Yanks', who for example, slugged Newsom for a single, double, triple and homer in the fifth inning.

The 7500 fans, including 2500 soldiers who were guests of the club, visioned a superb nine-inning job by Newsom when he moved through the first three innings without allowing the Yanks a hit. He was working with a 1-0 lead, and the Nats were rapping Chandler smartly despite their lone run.

But in the fourth Rizzuto smacked a single past Estalella and the panic was on. With one out, Newsom walked Henrich, and DiMaggio banged an inside pitch against the leftfield wall for a double that scored two runs. Joe Gordon's hot single past Estalella drove in the third run of the inning.

Rizzuto launched proceedings against Buck in the fifth also. He beat out a bunt that neither Newsom nor Estalella chose to field, and again Henrich drew a walk. This time DiMaggio didn't trifle with any two-bagger. He swatted one of Newsom's fast balls half way up into the center field seats and it actually bounced out of the park, probably the first ball in history to leap the concrete bleachers into Fifth Street under any circumstances. That gave the Yanks three runs for the inning and a bit later Keller doubled to left and

Wilson Vs. Gomez As Nats and Yanks Play Finale Today

Big Jack Wilson will attempt to salvage something for the Nats out of the three-game series with the Yankees when he takes the mound today in the series finale.

Wilson is being given precedence over Dutch Leonard who is being presented with an additional day's rest by Manager Bucky Harris.

The Nats will be facing left-handed pitching for the first time this season with Lefty Vernon Gomez due to take the mound for the Yankees.

Homer With Sacks Filled Beats Brooks

New Yorkers Even Series With Flock; Circuit Comes in 5th Against Kirby Higbe

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—In his second day as a regular major leaguer, young Willard Marshall hit the big jackpot—a homer with the bases loaded—today to give the Giants a 6-to-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers and square things between the old rivals in this young big league campaign.

The lanky outfield youngster, fresh up from Atlanta and so lightly regarded earlier in the spring that his name does not appear in the National League's annual book of promising prospects, connected for his big blow off Kirby Higbe to highlight a fifth-inning Giant outburst that gave the Polo Grounders all their runs.

Going into the sixth, a crowd of 12,440 customers was just about resigned to watching the Dodgers repeat their opening day victory. The Brooklyns had connected for a pair of runs off Fiddler Bill McGee and two run-producing outs, and Higbe had held the Giants to just one hit in four frames.

Then Harry the Horse Danning led off the Giant fifth with a homer. Mickey Witek and Bill Jurges singled and Bill Werber was safe on an error to set the stage for Marshall's poke into the upper shelf of the rightfield stands.

Good Trout Catches Reported As Maryland Season Begins

Officer Marton Carmack Gets Limit Of 10; Mumford Reeled in Nine

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., April 15.—There were fewer anglers, but better catches reported on Frederick County streams today, as the Maryland trout season opened. The paucity of fishermen was attributed to the war.

Among the best catches were those reported by Officer Martin Carmack, of the city police department, who got his limit of ten, and Roy Mumford, turnkey at the county jail, who reeled nine. Both men fished in Middle Creek.

Between 50 and 75 fishermen were reported on Big Hunting Creek, restricted to fly fishing. Five anglers there were reported by Game Warden Benjamin F. Phebus with having the creek limit. Six trout were measured there better than 14 inches in length.

Prominent men in national and State public life were guests at the Kingman Brewster and Lawrence Richey lodges, near Catoctin Furnace.

Angling in Fishing Creek was limited to the 3-mile section below the municipal dam. Best catches were in the vicinity of the bridge in Lewistown.

Burning Tree Gets P. G. A. Qualifying Test

The Middle Atlantic sectional qualifying round for the national P. G. A. championship will be held at the Burning Tree Club on May 4, over the 36-hole route, Al Houghton, District tournament chairman, announced yesterday.

The trials were slated for a Washington course as they were held in Baltimore in 1940 and Richmond last year. The Burning Tree site was somewhat of a surprise, however, coming after Pro Lewis Worsham asked for the tests on the meeting Monday night and received permission of the board yesterday.

The P. G. A. championship, which will be the major affair of the year due to the cancellation of the U. S. G. A. events, will be held May 25-30 at the Seaview course in Absecon, N. J., just 10 miles outside Atlantic City.

The Middle Atlantic section is expected to receive four or five places, depending upon the number of paid-up members in the association as of yesterday, dedline for the yearly dues. The usual ratio is about one place for every ten pros.

With the P. G. A. championship dates the earliest in years, the April 15 deadline for dues caught several of the Middle Atlantic members by surprise, it was disclosed in Monday's meeting.

Chandler Harper, the Portsmouth, Va., shotmaker who led the Middle Atlantic tests last year and finished fifth highest money winner on the winter tour, had not received any notices due to his traveling.

The local pros wired Harper Monday night upon his return from the Masters to Portsmouth and he was able to remain eligible for the qualifying rounds by rushing a letter to the business offices in Chicago. All the prominent pros in this section are now eligible and the field is expected to be the biggest in years with the championship offering $14,000 in prizes.

Few tournaments are played at Burning Tree and Houghton could not recall a P. G. A. affair of more significance than a pro-amateur being played at the exclusive club since the local days of Leo Diegel.

Houghton also announced a pro-amateur tournament at Belle Haven would be sandwiched into the local schedule, within a few weeks.

Pros qualifying for the P. G. A. championship will be automatically eligible for the sectional Hale America qualifying rounds in Atlantic City early in June. The local trials will be held May 25 at Bannockburn same day as the opening of the P. G. A. championship.

Coolidge Bows in School Debut to Roosevelt, 8 to 3

Leigh Joy Limits Colts To 8 Hits

Young Righthander Strikes Out Seven; Shankman Routed By 2d Inning Rally

By Bill Burnett

The Colts of Calvin Coolidge High got their introduction to interhigh baseball action yesterday, but didn't like it a bit. They were issued an 8-to-3 setback by Roosevelt in the first public school game of the year in their own bleacherless park.

Winners of two earlier outside scraps, the Colts went into their first series clash with great confidence. They even scored the first run of the game in the opening stanza without benefit of a hit.

Gradually, however, they became conscious of chunky Leigh Joy out on the mound for the Riders, and before it was over the smart, young right-hander had them handcuffed. Joy, getting the opening assignment for Roosevelt because of Billy Garner's ineligibility, served his control ball up with brilliant effect. He sprinkled eight hits over the distance, struck out seven. His roughest inning was the last, when Coolidge rallied on the strength of a walk and two singles and pushed home one run.

Sturgess Hits Single

Bernie Shankman, Coolidge's starting hurler, wasn't so impressive. He managed for a scoreless first inning, though three Riders reached base, but in the second things happened. Carl Sturgess started by banging a hard one for a triple to left. He scored on Gellis' long fly. With two out, Shankman walked Joy, DeShazo and Robertson, loading the bases, but finally forced Kennedy to ground into a force play.

The third inning was Shankman's most costly. A walk, error and Sid Drazin's drive which went under the cars in centerfield for a home run brought home three runs. Finally the big southpaw went out in the sixth, Ralph Meiklejohn coming in from short to pitch. To the five hits Shankman had allowed "Mike" added four more, but wasn't charged with a run.

Drazin's homer was somewhat overshadowed by Meiklejohn's triple in the third. It was a rising drive that sailed far over Dick Koester's head into left center, by far the longest blow of the day.

Easily the fielding star of the game was the same Koester, with his play on Meiklejohn's hit, his dash and jump for Koenig's liner in the third, and his shoestring catch of the same batter's sock to end the ninth.

Anacostia Wins Over Briarley Baseballers, 7-6

Recovering from a four-inning slump in which only two men were able to hit, Anacostia High School's fighting Indians staged a five-run rally in the last of the sixth yesterday to edge out a 7-6 victory over Briarley Military Academy.

Drawing first blood in the initial inning when Charlie Kuhl came home on Bob Nolte's sacrifice, Anacostia looked well on its way to a victorious performance. The tide was suddenly turned in the third when a costly error by Paul Blaine brought home two Red Devil runs. From then until the fateful sixth, when the Indians riddled Reed for five hits, Anacostia was unable to threaten Briarley with anything more than one hard single.

Superman of the day was Bob Nolte, who scored twice and hit a single and a triple. Ros Enloe starred for the losers with three singles and 18 putouts.

This was Anacostia's preparatory game for their interhigh debut against Eastern Friday. Previously they had knocked off Episcopal, 11-2. Briarley holds two wins over National Training School.

White Sox Beaten by Ninth-Inning Uprising; John Humphries Victim of Attack

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 15.—The St. Louis Browns, held in check for eight innings by Johnny Humphries today, cut loose for five runs in the ninth to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 6-5. It was the Brown's second straight victory of the new American League season.

A crowd of 3087 saw Humphries apparently heading for a three-hit, 3-1 victory going into the last inning, the Browns having made their lone tally on Chet Laabs' homer in the fifth. Then a walk, a single by Harlond Clift and a double by George McQuinn before anyone was out brought in one run and forced Humphries' retirement.

Humphries successor, Buck Ross, walked Roy Cullenbine and forced Laabs to fly out, Clift scoring the tying run after the catch. Glenn McQuillen grounded out but Rookie Shortstop Vernon Stephens parked a home run in the leftfield stands to score three runs and give St. Louis a 6-3 edge.

Jack Dempsey To Work Mat Event Tonight

Lieut. Jack Dempsey, of the New York State National Guard, will don his referee togs and handle tonight's championship match at Riverside Stadium between Sandor Szabo, the National Wrestling Association titleholder, and Cowboy Luttrall, the Texas wild man.

Dempsey has been called on to do what is considered a rather painful job—that of refereeing a match in which his arch rival, Luttrall, will be one of the participants.

Dempsey and Luttrall are no strangers in the same ring. In fact, it's the third time their paths will cross.

A few years ago the Manassa Mauler worked a wrestling match in Atlanta, and the cowboy had the audacity to floor Dempsey with a right to the jaw. Jack countered with a right, sent the cowboy down. A challenge match with regular boxing gloves on followed, and two weeks later in the very same ring some 12,000 fans saw the old Mauler knock out Luttrall in two rounds. Luttrall, however, claims Jack used a "gimmick" in his gloves."

Dempsey has warned Luttrall that he cannot face the champ with his right hand taped, as has been the case in the past. But the Cowboy, grim and defiant, snorts back with the reply, "try and take it off, you mug." And Dempsey, it appears, will be forced to do just that. If, and when he does, the fun really will start. It may not be all fun for Luttrall, since Dempsey still retains a good bit of the power in old "iron mike," they say.

In a two-man team battle Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman, the local champions, will seek their twelfth straight against Henry Kulkovich and Jim Austeri.

Joe Cox and Pat Fraley will meet in the semiwindup; Tommy O'Toole will take on Rough Rudy Dusek and Emil Dusek will face Milo Steinborn.

Pirates Knock Riddle From Box; Win, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 15.—Elmer was no Riddle today to the Pittsburgh Pirates who, knocking last year's leading National League hurler from the box with a five-run outburst in the first inning, made it two straight over Cincinnati, 6 to 2.

Eight men faced the usually steady Georgian before he went to the showers in the face of three singles, a walk and two doubles. Ray Starr, 35-year-old veteran of the minors, relieved him and, spacing four hits, allowed only one run, Bob Elliott's eighth inning homer.

Only twice after a first inning tally did the Reds show anything like power: Bert Haas' second-inning triple followed by Rollie Hemsley's single for their second score, and in the fifth as Eddie Joost doubled behind Starr who had drawn one of seven passes parceled by Lloyd Dietz.

Starr was nipped, however, as he tried to cross the plate on Lonnie Frey's fly to Johnny Barrett.

By International News Service

St. Louis, April 15.—Harry Gumbert held the Chicago Cubs to four hits today, and the St. Louis Cardinals chalked up a 4-to-2 victory.

The Cubs got away to a two-run lead, but the Cards tied it up in the fourth on Terry Moore's triple, a walk, and singles by Gus Mancuso and Martin Marion.

Ray Sanders' single, Jimmy Brown's double, and a single by Marion gave the Cards the winning run and another good measure in the sixth.

Jake Mooty and Hiram Bithorn, rookie lefthander, pitched for the Cubs, and the former was charged with the loss.

By International News Service

Philadelphia, April 15.—Big Jim Tobin today held the Philadelphia Phils to eight hits and hit a two-run homer as the Boston Braves made it two in a row over the local team, 6 to 2.

The big blow for the Phils was a ninth-inning home run by Danny Litwhiler.

The Braves sewed it up in the third when they drove Cy Blanton to the showers in a four-hit, three-run attack, then Tobin belted his homer with Miller aboard in the fifth.

Buck Newsom Routed, Yanks Beat Nats, 9-3

Caught By Whisker

Gordon's triple produced the fielding play of the game, a multiple-star affair that evolved when Gordon tried to stretch his swat into a homer. Bruce Campbell retrieved the ball in the centerfield corner, relayed it to Joe Gomez, who in turn relayed the ball to Mickey Vernon in the infield. The third perfect throw on the play, Vernon's, into Early's mitt, caught Gordon at home by an eyelash.

Bill Zuber held the Yankees runless for two innings, but they picked up two runs off Masterson in the eighth on four assorted hits, including Chandler's Texas League single.

Double plays—three of them—balked the Nats. Case and Spence led off the first inning with singles, but First Baseman Levy made a fancy play on Vernon's grounder to start a double play, and only one run scored.

In the fifth Pinch Hitter Stan Galle walked and Spence also drew a walk with one out, Vernon got the Nats' other two runs of the day home. He did it with a slashing double to left.

Thereafter the Nats were runless. Gomez hit into a double play in the sixth, and they passed up a scoring chance in the seventh after Rookie Alex Kvasnak, pinch hitting for Zuber, led off with a single to center. Case followed with a single to left, but the overambitious Kvasnak was a victim of Charley Keller's throwing arm when he tried to take third on the hit. In the ninth, Pinch Hitter Al Evans singled, and with two out, the Nats filled the bases on passes, but they got nothing.

Umps Day Dreaming

The umpires were in a fog most of the afternoon . . . one play in the eighth inning, a pitch went into the dirt with Yankees on first and second, and Umpire Ed Rommel called it a ball . . . Umpire George Pipgras at first base, sent the advancing runners back to their original bases in the belief that Chandler had swung and fouled the ball onto the infield . . . Third Base Umpire Bill Summers thought Rommel had called it a foul ball . . . eventually, the runners were permitted to advance after the umpires went into a huddle to get a unanimity of opinion . . . worst decision of the afternoon was by Pipgras who called Repass out at first on a slow roller down the first base line . . . Chandler, who fielded the ball and attempted to tag Repass, hasn't tagged him as we went to press.

Bethesda Golf Team Defeats St. Albans, 9-0

Bethesda High School golfers were taken to the sixteenth green in eight of nine matches with St. Albans yesterday, but supplied the winning punch in all of them and took the lead in the Metropolitan section of the Scholastic Golf League by winning, 9 to 0, at Congressional.

Army Downs Hoyas; Navy Edges Michigan, 7 to 5

Dieckelman Hero, Goat In 7-3 Loss

Cadets Tee Off In First 2 Frames To Gain Victory; Guckeyson Stars

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., April 15.—Hefty Johnny Dieckelman played a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde role here today as Georgetown's baseball team suffered a 7-3 defeat at the hands of Army.

It was Dieckelman who allowed himself to be hammered for seven hits and five runs in the first two innings before turning over the mound duties to Joe Wells, but it was also Dieckelman who batted in two of Georgetown's runs, one on a 350-foot second inning home run, and scored the third marker himself.

In going down to defeat for the first time in two games, the Hoyas left seven men on the bases, three of them in the fourth inning, when Tom Costello was fanned by Tom Tarver with the bases loaded to end the inning.

Army's Third Triumph

Army found the slants of Dieckelman and Wells to its liking in chalking up victory No. 3 in as many starts against collegiate opposition. With the exception of Tarver, each Cadet batsman connected for at least one hit, Bill Corley and Johnny Guckeyson, the later a senior from Chevy Chase, Md., rapped out three safeties apiece and Capt. Bill Garland and Ernie White hit twice.

After reaching Dieckelman in the early stages, Army eased out to final victory, added runs in the sixth and eighth innings. Georgetown's biggest rally came in the sixth inning when two runs were added to Dieckelman's earlier homer. Johnny Kulikowski singled into right, went to second on Tarver's balk and scored on Dieckelman's one bagger, also into right. Joe Gyorgydeak the next man up, tripled into center to score Dieckelman.

Lucky Strike Pinmen Lose District Lead

By not bowling due to a postponed set, the Arcadia team in the Men's District League is on top by virtue or a triple loss suffered by Hokie Smith's Lucky Strike team to a fast-bowling Georgetown crew, which rolled team highs of 702-2,005.

Arcadia has actually won less games than the three quintets tied for second place—Hi-Skor, Rosslyn and Lucky Strike—but as their losses are two games under the second-place teams, Arcadia enjoys the mathamatical leadership. Arlington, is next, one game ahead of Spillway, with the standing of the first nine as follows through last night:

Catholic U.'s First Baseball Team in 15 Years Wins

Catholic University First Baseman Tom Murnane looked over his shoulder and, guess what, his foot was on the bag and Stan Benjamin, of Washington College, was out, despite his graceful leap to the bag in the game at C. U. Stadium yesterday. The hosts won, 6-3

Cards Take 6-3 Decisions From Washington College; Lefty Grove, Jr., Is Losing Pitcher

By Jack Munhall

More hustlin' than any peewee sandlot team and more chippery than a flock of beserk magpies, Catholic University's first major baseball team in 15 years yesterday got off to a successful start at Brookland. Coming from behind Coach "Shorty" Hughes' do-or-die spirited youngsters handed Washington College's Sho'men their first loss of the campaign, 6-3.

No polished major leaguish appearing ball club is this young C. U. club. They're the kind of kids who are going to make Coach Hughes tear the rest of his wispy, blosdish hair out one minute and make him eat his blue cap the next.

Typical of C. U.'s Frank Merriwell esprit de corps was the way Relief Pitcher Bernie Cody snapped out of a trying situation in the eighth just when Hughes was about to thumb him to the showers.

Cody had come into the game in place of the exhausted Larry Eidsness, C. U.'s starting pitcher, who admitted he couldn't go on at the end of the seventh. Eidsness, a senior, whose competitive pitching experience is negligible, had done remarkably well in yielding only five hits and two runs—one of them tainted.

Cody, nervous at the start as he pawed the fresh dirt with his big pitching foot and pounded the ball stacatto-fashion into his mitt, got off to a dangerously bad start. C. U. had already attained its final victory margin, but when Cody gave up a single to Jim Stevens, lead-off Sho'men hitter and then, with one out, walked Frank Semele, Coach Hughes began to fidget on the bench. The visitors' heavy artillery was coming up.

Grove Losing Pitcher

He ordered John Baltrukonis to warm up. And it was then that Cody awakened to his plight. The sight of his teammate laboring frantically to warm up his arm for an unexpected assignment, Cody gritted his teeth and bore down. He forced Pinch Hitter George Messick to foul out to Catcher Hank Garriaty on a nice catch, and he ended the threat by feeding Frank Hastings, a triple-hitter his previous batting turn, a change of pace that he couldn't get out of the infield.

Eidsness, a square-shouldered right-hander, was the winning pitcher, and Lefty Bob Grove, jr., son of the famed former big league mound star, the loser. Young Grove, unlike his father, an orthdox hurler, supplanted "Mac" Maguire in the sixth and had the devil's own merry time of it.

American U. Beats Loyola; McNab Stars

Rookie Rube McNab, a relief pitcher, yesterday led American University to its first baseball victory of the season, a 5-4 decision over Loyola of Baltimore.

McNab, taking over from Charlie Kligman in the fifth with none out, held the Baltimoreans to two hits for the next four innings and then in the ninth he checked a threatened rally on a fast-fielding play.

With Loyola runners on first and third, McNab picked up Pinch-hitter Gay's grounder, wheeled and dashed over to third base, to retire Babe Schwallenberg, who had opened the inning with a double.

The winning A. U. run, in the eighth, was scored by "Shanty" Shepherd, driven in by Hertz.

It was A. U.'s first triumph in four games. The Eagles lost to George Washington, Georgetown and Washington College. For Loyola it was the third loss in four starts.

Lavrakas Clouts Two Circuit Blows

Catcher's 2 Homers Accounts for Five Navy Runs; Hurler Davis Given Support

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 15.—Catcher Lefty Lavrakas clouted two homers today as Navy edged Michigan's Big Ten Conference baseball champs, 7 to 5.

Lavrakas' twin homers accounted for five Navy runs while Capt. Jackie Stowe walloped a round-tripper in the first to wipe out the Wolverines' brief one-run lead.

Although outhit 12 to 11, Navy gave Southpaw Jackie Davis sparkling support in the late rounds, choking off Michigan's determined eighth-inning rally with only two runs. Phil Hurt pitched the ninth for Navy and fanned two of the three batters he faced.

Pastor, Conn Trail Louis In Rankings

Bob Pastor, New York heavyweight, has taken rank with Billy Conn, of Pittsburgh, as a logical contender for Joe Louis' heavyweight crown in the latest quarterly rankings of the National Boxing Association.

Pastor, thus, replaces Abe Simon, his stablemate, who was dropped to the class below listed as an "outstanding boxer." Pastor catapulted into the limelight by victories over Gus Lesnevich, Booker Beckwith and Lem Franklin, whom he knocked out in eight rounds.

Lee Savold, blond, Des Moines, Iowa, heavyweight, continued a marked climb among the big boys. Although fighting lesser-known heavyweights, Savold managed to compile a record of 17 straight victories.

Senior Tracksters Win Annual Meet At Eastern High

The senior, junior and sophomore classes finished in that order in the Eastern High School intra-class track and field meet yesterday in the Eastern Stadium, the grads with 41 points, the juniors 31 and sophomores five. More than 200 students competed in the annual affair, which was witnessed by the remainder of the student body.

Tony Torre tossed the javelin 156½ feet in the outstanding performance of the day, quite a heave for a schoolboy.

The high scorers were Vince Mathews, who won the low hurdles, was second in the 100-yard dash and tied for second in the high jump, and Harry Prince, who won the half-mile and broad jump.

Michigan invades Maryland at College Park and West Virginia tackles George Washington on the East Ellipse today to head the collegiate sports card here. The Maryland game is listed for 4 p. m., G. W.'s at 2:30. Johns Hopkins nine visits American at 3 o'clock.

Meantime, out at Columbia Country Club, George Washington's tennis team opens its season with Richmond as opponent.

West Virginia's nine defeated G. W. last year and is favored to do the same today. Michigan also was a winner over Maryland in their tussle last year, but this time the game shapes up as even.

After George Washington, West Virginia's Mountaineers will meet Maryland tomorrow and Navy Saturday, on their annual Eastern trip.

Coach Errett Rodgers, beginning his twenty-second year as baseball coach, will bring 14 players on the trip. They are Dick Tritschler, John Carenbauer, Hector Napoleoni, Yorke Doliner, Roy Lester, Charley Shaffer, Carlos Rodriquez, Jim Rich, Art Raeder, Bob Johnson, Bob Bartlett, Don Schaffer, Harold Stumpp, and Orville Hardman.

Heading the G. W. tennis team are Capt. Murdaugh Madden, Bill Morrell and Burt Smith, playing in that order. Other singles players, in order, are Wentworth Linebarger, Jack Quintrell and George Eyster. Doubles will pair Madden-Linebarger, Morrell-Eyster and Smith-Quintrell.

Blustering, $87.40 Shot, Takes Conowingo Purse at 'Graw'

Belk Filly Stages Game Battle for Victory; Trainer Is Fined for 'Nerving'

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 15.—J. B. Belk, the Charlottesville, Va., sportsman who breeds thoroughbred horses as a hobby, saw his Blustering win the Conowingo Handicap in a thrilling nose finish that brought joy to the hearts of a few chosen longshot players. Paying an $87.40 mutuel, the highest price of the meeting here, Blustering put up a game finish to last ahead of Breckinridge Long's Equipet. Third money in the group of seven fillies and mares going 6 furlongs went to the Lavenn Stable's Chuckle, the favorite.

Blustering, a daughter of the rather obscure sire, Sir Walter, and out of Flaming Mamie, a popular campaigner at one time in Maryland, had won only one race before her spectacular outing today. Making her second start after having set the pace and having stopped at Bowie, Blustering not only won but turned in time of 1:12 2-5, good for this oval at present. Owner Belk is president of the National Horseman's Protective Association and the Horsemen's Guild.

Brady Is Fined

The day brought the first ruling of the stewards as the result of the investigation of the "nerving" of horses. Trainer Pat Brady was fined $50 for failure to report Rodin as having undergone the pain-deadening operation. Rodin is owned by C. E. Nelson.

Getting back to the feature, it was a case of trying to catch Blustering. Jockey Ken McCombs had the filly away on top and Jockey R. Eccard elected to keep Wise Niece going with her. Blustering, however, had too much speed for this Wise Counsellor miss and she stopped.

Chuckle came between horses to improve her position and Equipet lost ground on the outside while moving up. Blustering kept going and, in midstretch, turned back a bid of Chuckle. Equipet, shaken up by Jockey Deering, went after the Belk filly and the move lacked inches of a dead heat.

Jamaica Turf Feature Taken By Richmond

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Race Track, Jamaica, N. Y., April 15.—A. J. Sackett's Richmond today began his seasonal campaign in the same fashion he did a year ago by starting off with a victory over his favorite track. The 4-year-old son of Head Play, away from competition since last June, was thoroughly fit for his 1942 debut, withstanding a long, hard drive to emerge on top by a head in the 6 furlong Polydor (Class C) handicap.

It was another case of "horses for courses," and Richmond paid his backers the liberal odds of $26 for $2. The colt started only four times last season. He won the first two over the local strip, then failed in a pair of subsequent efforts.

Richmond's score came at the expense of the heavily played Sales Talk, which was coupled with Joy Boy as the Louis B. Mayer entry and closed slightly better than 6 to 5. Sales Talk beat Mrs. Alice F. Sherman's Grey Wolf by two lengths for the place. Another big crowd of 16,079 saw Richmond step the distance in 1:12-1-5 under Jimmy Stout.

Requested Turns In Smart Workout For $15,000 Event

By the Associated Press

Havre de Grace, Md., April 15.—Requested, Ben F. Whitaker's Kentucky Derby candidate, turned in a smart workout today in preparation for Saturday's $15,000-added Chesapeake Stakes.

Requested covered the mile and one-sixteenth Chesapeake route in 1:46 3-5 with Jockey Leon Haas up. The time compared favorably with the 1:45 1-5 in which Porter's Cap won the race last year.

Mrs. Albert Sabath's Alsab, also a Derby and Chesapeake candidate, went on the track for an airing.

Requested and Alsab will be shipped to Louisville Monday.

Narragansett to Donate To U. S.'s War Chest

Pawtucket, R. I., April 15 (AP).—The Narragansett Racing Association announced today that a ninth race would be held every Saturday and that the track's 6½ per cent of the muuel betting on the extra races plus breakage would be donated to America's war chest.

The plan will be in effect during the spring and summer meeting beginning April 18 and on Labor Day.

The association will pay the purses and all other expenses incidental to the extra race, the announcement said.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Alsab and Requested are scheduled to leave this track next Monday en route to Louisville for the 1942 Kentucky Derby. They will make the long ride in the same car. After showing signs of going over a distance of ground when he came from behind in the Chesapeake Trial here opening day, Colchis has been made a supplementary entry for the Preakness. Colchis always has been regarded as strictly a sprinter. Trainer Vincent Mara has confidence that with proper conserving of speed, Colchis will be a keen factor at the mile and three-sixteenths of the Preakness. If you are planning to see one of the three remaining big races here, the $15,000 added Chesapeake goes Saturday, the $2500 added Aberdeen Stakes on next Wednesday, and the $10,000 added Philadelphia Handicap on Saturday a week, closing day of the meeting. Eddie McCann, the Martinsburg mauler, has returned from Florida and is working for the Racing Form. Horsemen have asked the stewards to allow jockeys to weigh in and out without saddle cloths, etc. The officials say this is a commission rule and is out of their hands. The weight involved is slightly over a half pound. Little George Cusimano, the Washington boy who climbed on a horse for the first time last Tuesday and rode to a nose victory, is still smiling. He is under contract to the Christiana Stable, and has a brother, Frank, who used to ride around the half-milers. Frank won a couple of races on our old friend Huppy. Walter Haight goes next week. I hope it rains. Despite the fact that some think the future of racing in the East is in doubt, there was a merry battle to claim thoroughbreds during the Tropical Park meeting. Thirty-one horses changed hand and the deals involved $60,300. The top price was the $4000 paid by Mrs. J. B. Burnstein for the Circle M Ranch's Ship Biscuit. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SPANISH SUN turned in a good third at Bowie and may be best in a field that contains many first-time starters. LA REIGH has gone good in trials. LADY TENNIE has had some education.

Second race—FLYING REIGH is dropping down to meet these and has all the earmarks of a winner in this field. ISLE DE PINE will draw plenty of play and may take it all but looks like a tired horse to me.

Third race—HANDY TOM was a classy horse around here last year and is said to be ready for the best. DOUBLE B. has speed and is dangerous. CAVALIER had class once and may be close.

Fourth race—MIGRATION gets in light thanks to the apprentice allowance and I look for this one to get home on top. BASILEUS raced with good sprinters last out and probably needed that race. BLENSIGN for show.

Fifth race—INDIAN SUN won at Bowie and may be fit enough to turn back this kind. SIR COUNSELLOR has speed and is a threat. JOE RAY was a good one hereabouts during 1941.

Sixth race—FREE TRADER was crying to run and was pinched off in that last outing at the other track. May take it all here. DEVILTRY and PRETTY LADY to take care of the place and show.

Seventh race—LEGAL LIGHT needs only to improve slightly to take this gang into camp. I'm going to string along. CRIMSON LANCER and HAZEL W. for the other money positions.

Eighth race—MYSTIQUE should take the main portion of this purse. Needs only a share of the racing luck. NORTHPORT and FOOT SOLDIER to battle it out for the place.

Best bet—Migration.

Food Chain Changes Name

Stockholders of Union Premier Food Stores, Inc., at the annual meeting voted to change the name of the company to Food Fair Stores, Inc. It was felt that this change was advisable because the 75 retail supermarkets operated by the company and its subsidiaries are known as Food Fair and the phrase Food Fair has consequently become synonymous with the company in the trade.

George Friedland, president, told stockholders that the gains reported for 1941 have been continued so far in 1942, pointing out that gross sales for the first 12 weeks of the current year rose to $9,934,384 from $7,431,308 in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of 33.68 per cent.

Furnace Output Curtailed by WPB

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board has ordered use of iron and steel in manufacture of warm-air furnaces curtailed immediately.

Large manufacturers, who made or assembled 8000 or more furnaces in 1940, must reduce consumption of the metals 50 per cent under the 1940 level. Smaller manufacturers, representing 80 per cent of the 200 firms in the industry, must cut only 10 per cent.

Meanwhile, mining enterprises were granted a top war priority rating by WPB to assist them in obtaining explosives and explosive equipment. Mines whose output is more than 30 per cent of gold or silver, in terms of dollar value, are not aided by the action.

Mortgage Bankers Hear War Plea

New Orleans, April 15 (AP).—Elimination of all activities which do not contribute to a victory over the Axis was urged before a conference and mortgage clinic sponsored by the Mortgage Bankers Association of America here.

Frederick P. Champ, of Logan, Utah, president of the national group, asserted that "activities that do not contribute to the main objective should be forgotten for the duration."

Speaking of "nonessentials," he said, "the 40-hour week has no place in a mobilized America that is fighting for its life—and it must go. Nondefense or nonessential spending by the Government is indefensible at a time when over resources must be conserved—and it should be stopped."

10 Shoe Chain Firms Net 4% on Sales

Boston, April 15 (AP).—The New England Shoe and Leather Association reported today that ten chain companies operating 1916 shoe stores earned aggregate net profits of $6,162,705 in 1941 on net sales of $158,808,196, or a ratio of profits to sales of 4 per cent.

Gifford Cites Soaring Taxes and Lower Net, Hints Telephone Rate Increases to Be Asked

Proposed Taxes Mean Dividend Not to Be Earned in Full

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., said today that if proposed taxes were enacted the company's usual dividend might not be earned in full and indicated "regulatory bodies" might be asked to permit increases in telephone rates.

Gifford, speaking at the annual meeting of stockholders, said:

"We are making all possible operating economies and, if and where, it becomes necessar, we shall ask regulatory bodies to permit us to increase revenues by increases in telephone rates so far as is not inconsistent with winning the war or with the public interest."

Referring t. the company's statement to stockholders delivered earlier in the day, Gifford said:

"As you have seen from the statement inclosed with your dividend check, the earnings of the system with the present tax rate are more than covering the dividend.

"This in spite of the fact that these taxes are nearly $5 per share greater than in 1940. You will also have noticed that the tax proposals of the Secretary of the Treasury would reduce earnings by an additional $4 per share per year, so that if those proposals were enacted into law the usual dividend would not be earned in full.

"In fact, the earnings on investment would be reduced to the lowest point on record, including the worst year of the recent depression. During the depression the company continued to pay dividends at the usual rate, although, because of depressed business conditions, they were not fully earned and were paid in part out of surplus.

"There are too many uncertainties ahead today to say in advance what it might be wise to do if, due to war time practices and not to a depression, earnings again should not fully cover the dividend requirements.

"Conditions are obviously not the same as in a depression. Then we had a telephone plant which could handle more business than we had and it was clear that we would again earn the dividend as soon as we had more business.

"Now we have all the business we can handle, with no spare nor idle plant, in spite of having added nearly one billion dollars of telephone plant since 1935 and yet, because of increased taxes needed for the winning of the war, we might not fully earn the $9 dividend."

Gifford pointed out that because of the war needs for copper and other essential materials construction of new facilities to take care of civilian demands for telephone service was being restricted increasingly by Government priority regulations.

A. T. & T. Net Equals $9.98 a Share in 12-Month Period

The Bell system's consolidated net income for the quarter ended Feb. 28 was $51,555,823, equal to $2.66 a share.

After minority interest the net income applicable to A. T. & T. stock was $49,723,064 for the current period against $51,135,401 in the quarter ended February 28, 1941.

Consolidated total net income for the 12 months ended February 28 was $201,063,296, equal, after minority interests, to $10.36 a share, compared with $218,386,714 or $11.22 a share on the same basis the year before. Net income after minority interest in the current period was $193,531,287 compared with $209,577,519 in the preceding year.

The parent company's net income for the 12 months ended March 31 was shown as $186,572,205 or $9.98 a share compared with $190,240,936 or $10.18 a share in the preceding year.

The decline in net income from a year ago contrasted with the increased number of telephones in service in the Bell System, 19,163,400 on March 31 or 7.3 per cent more than at the end of March, 1941. The system had a net gain of about 322,000 telephones in the first quarter of 1942 compared with a net gain of 371,300 in the corresponding period of 1941.

Gifford reported the number of toll and long distance conversations for the first quarter of 1942 was about 12.5 per cent greater than for the similar period last year, while the increase in the "longer haul" calls was about 30 per cent.

General Foods Cuts Dividend

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—General Foods Corporation today reduced its quarterly common stock dividend 10 cents from a previously paid 50 cents quarterly to 40 cents. It was made payable May 15 to stock of record April 27.

Of the reduction, C. M. Chester, chairman, said the 40-cent rate was not intended to establish any fixed rate for the future.

"It may be decreased or increased contingent on what the earnings records of the company show for the remainder of the year, which, of course, will be dependent upon various factors, including sales and the amount the corporation will have to pay in taxes."

The quarterly report showed net of $2,737,481, or 48.9 cents a common share, as against $4,502,928, or 82.5 cents a share in the first quarter last year.

The decrease in net earnings was, Chester said, despite record sales both in dollar value and tonnage. First quarter, 1942, sales aggregated $55,846,371 as compared with $45,249,496 in the first three months of 1941.

This year from the first three months' income $6,303,542 was set aside for taxes, inventories and contingencies, as against $2,764,314 in the first quarter last year.

John S. Prescott, a vice president, was announced as the new acting treasurer, succeeding Lewis A. Zahrn, who died last week after 39 years with General Foods.

Wholesale Pork Prices Revised

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration issued a sweeping revision of its ceiling on wholesale pork cuts yesterday, to eliminate advantages it said had been gained by some wholesalers who increased prices immediately before OPA fixed the prices.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson predicted the action might "effect a slight decrease" in retail pork prices.

The original ceiling pegged prices on dressed hogs and wholesale pork cuts at highest levels between March 3 and March 7. The amendment knocked out this provision and required all sellers to compute ceiling prices by using the highest levels between February 16 and February 20 plus any increase reflected in Chicago carload trading spot market quotations to the March 3-7 period.

Late Earnings Statements

Southeastern Atlantic Greyhound reported net profit of $797,938 for 1941 compared with $554,630 for 1940. Earnings per common share for the two years were put at $3.76 and $2.55, respectively. The report did not include any operations of the recently acquired Dixie Coaches and Union Bus Co.

American Potash & Chemical Corporation reported 1941 net income of $1,054,860, equal to $2 a share on the capital stock, compared with $2,378,008, or $4.50 a share, in 1940.

Interstate Department Stores reported for the year ended January 31 net profit of $1,117,655, equal to $3.23 a share on the common stock compared with $534,440, or $1.38 a share, in the preceding fiscal year.

Creole Petroleum Corporation reported for 1941 consolidated net income of $12,297,275 after ordinary charges and $1,800,942 set aside for prior royalties to be paid to the Venezuelan government. This was equal to $1.76 a capital share and compared with $6,834,170, or 98 cents a share in 1940.

Richfield Oil Corporation and subsidiaries reported 1941 net profit of $4,323,611, equal to $1.08 a share on the capital stock compared with $3,814,590, or 95 cents a share, in 1940.

W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co., of Fort Madison, Iowa, announced net income of $934,807, or $5.90 a common share in the fiscal year ended February 28, 1942, against $812,937, or $5.13 a common share in the preceding fiscal year.

Chicago & North Western Railway Co. reported 1941 net income of $1,460,117 against a deficit of $5,222,369 for the previous year. Net railway operating income increased 66 per cent for the year to $16,793,076, or $6,698,576 more than was reported for 1940.

Oil Refineries Slow in East

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—East Coast refineries slowed to 56.4 per cent of capacity during the week ended April 11, the American Petroleum Institute reported today, compared with a national average of 75.1 per cent and their year ago operations at 90.7 per cent.

The decline reflected a growing tendency to skip refined products to the East in place of crude, observers said.

The institute's weekly survey showed, however, stocks of petroleum products continued to decline in the East, where restrictions have been placed on gasoline and fuel oil, and rationing threatens.

The East Coast's gasoline production was down to 970,000 barrels for the week against 1,161,000 the previous week and 1,606,000 a year earlier.

Gasoline stocks at the end of the week totaled 17,035,000 barrels, against 17,319,000 the previous week and 20,633,000 in the 1941 week.

Light fuel oil on hand totaled 6,261,000 barrels, against 7,005,000 a week before and 7,190,000 in the comparable 1941 date, and stocks of residual (industrial) fuel oil were 5,896,000 barrels, against 5,761,000 the previous week and 8,897,000 a year earlier.

United States gasoline stocks at the end of the week totaled 104,560,000 barrels, compared with 105,149,000 the week before and 98,110,000 a year earlier.

Northern Pacific Revenues Up 24%

St. Paul, Minn., April 15 (AP).—Northern Pacific Railway's operating revenues increased 24 per cent in 1941, and a further rise is anticipated this year, according to the company's forty-fifth annual report submitted to stockholders at their annual meeting in St. Paul.

Five directors, whose terms have expired, were reelected. They are H. H. Irvine and R. M. Weyerhaeuser, of St. Paul, and Grenville Kane, Gerald M. Livingston and Frank L. Polk, all of New York City.

The annual report showed operating revenues in 1941 were $85,346,327, an increase of $16,631,692 over 1940. Operating expenses were $59,909,720, an increase of $8,294,456. Net railway operating income was $19,922,778, an increase of $6,339,703. Net income, after paying all charges, was $7,757,019, up $5,692,927.

Visible Cattle Supply Estimated 2% Less

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that the number of cattle on feed for market in the 11 corn belt States on April 1 was 2 per cent smaller than a year earlier.

This was said to be the first year since 1937 that the number on feed on April 1 was below the number of the previous year, with the decrease largely in the corn belt States east of the Mississippi River. In all States west of that river, except Iowa, the number on feed was larger than last year.

Pittsburgh Steel Co. Accused Of Paying Excess Scrap Price

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 14.—Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker today issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the Pittsburgh Steel Co. from purchasing unprepared scrap iron after the Office of Price Administration charged the concern with violating fixed price schedules.

OPA Attorney Amos J. Coffman, in what he described as the first civil action of its kind, charged the Pittsburgh concern with purchasing more than 70 carloads of unprepared scrap iron at prices $1 to $2.50 in excess of revised price schedule No. 4, issued by the Federal Price Administrator. The purchases dated from February 21, 1942, Coffman's complaint said.

The purchases were made throughout the Southwestern States, Coffman asserted, and consisted of agricultural and oil field scrap, which was delivered to Memphis, Tenn., from where it was barged by river to the concern's plant at Monessen, Pa. Coffman's complaint said:

"Such continuing purchases would be seriously injurious to the war effort of the Nation with respect to the production of war materials, with respect to the war against inflation and particularly with respect to other consumers of steel scrap who must compete with the defendant for the very scrap for which the defendant is paying prices in excess of those provided by the revised price schedule No. 4."

Members of the industry complained, Coffman added, that if the Pittsburgh concern's alleged violations continued they would be forced to do without scrap or would have to violate the price control structure to compete.

". . . Such violations would increase the disruption of the scrap market in many cities and areas throughout the country," Coffman asserted.

Judge Schoonmaker's restraining order was made effective immediately, and a hearing set for April 24.

Farmers Get Bulk of Food Price Boost

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 15.—The Cleveland Trust Co. calculated today that "farmers have received nearly all the increases in the rising prices of food since the advances got under way in 1939."

"Wholesalers, storekeepers, warehousemen, railroads and truckers have received practically none of the increases" the bank declared after analyzing data taken from compilations of U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The income of the average nonfarm family is estimated to be slightly more than $2000 per year. Of that the family pays out almost one-fourth for food. The present rising prices and the prospects of further increases are therefore of great importance to every family."

Continuing its monthly business review, Cleveland Trust said farmers in 1939 "received $126 from each family for the quantities of these foods that they supplied, and in 1941 they received $164 from each of them.

"If they continue to receive during the remainder of 1942 the amount paid to them by each family in January and February, they will receive $194 in 1942. It seems likely that the cost of food will continue to rise somewhat during this year and the amount paid to the farmers by each family will probably be more than $200, and it will constitute well over half of the retail price of the food."

War production is swelling, "and in a good many lines it can well be described as booming," the bank added. "The physical volume of industrial production is now about 50 per cent greater than it was at the peak of prosperitwy in 1929."

Borden Hopeful Of Continuing $1.40 Dividend

Jersey City, N. J., April 15 (AP).—Theodore G. Montague, president of the Borden Co., distributors of milk and milk products, told stockholders today the company was hopeful of continuing common stock dividends at the current rate if future taxes are not to drastic.

The company in recent years has paid three interim dividends of 30 cents and a final dividend of 50 cents fro a total of $1.40 annually.

Montague reported sales in the first three months of 1942 had held steady, but declined to estimate net profits for the period because of uncertainty ove rtax rates. Earnings for January and February, before taxes, he said, were 15 to 20 per cent ahead of 1941 figures.

The executive said the company was attempting to lengthen the life of its 8000 to 10,000 trucks by staggering deliveries and in some instances returning horse drawn wagons to service.

WPB Organizes Paper Committee

By the Associated Press

Formation of a 20-member pulp and paper industry advisory committee was announced yesterday by the War Production Board.

David Winton, chief of WPB's pulp and paper branch, was designated Government presiding officer.

The committee will advise WPB on the development of the allocation program recently set up for all wood pulp, on chlorine curtailments affecting the paper industry, and on newsprint problems growing out of future transportation shortages and the possible diversion of power in Canada from newsprint mills to aluminum production.

Three members of the committee represent newsprint producers: Ernest Mahler, Neenah, Wis., of the Kimberly-Clark Corporation; Arthur L. Hobson, Boston, of the St. Croix Paper Co., and Stewart E. Kay, New York City, of International Paper Co.

Socialized Capitalism Forecast by Economist

Boston, April 15 (AP).—A system of "socialized capitalism" for the United States, in which business, labor and Government would participate, was seen yesterday by Paul T. Babson, chairman of the board of Standard & Poor's Corporation, a business and financial reporting organization.

He told the executives club of the Boston Chamber of Commerce that the new economic setup "may prove to be a rather good thing if the transition can be kept gradual."

Babson, who also is president of the United Business Service, a statistical organization, told the business leaders:

"The Government is in business to stay—learn how to work with it."

Wider Exploration for New Wells Urged To Maintain Present U. S. Oil Superiority

Oil is the life blood of modern mechanized war machines.

"Victory for the United Nations will depend more upon oil than upon any other single element in our military resources," Wilson said.

"Our Navy and Army, our planes, tanks, transport vehicles and vessels as well as other products of our war industries cannot reach the field of battle without the power and lubrication which only the oil industry can provide."

The United States is in a dominant position so far as world oil production is concerned, Wilson pointed out, but he adds that our oil superiority may rest upon keeping exploration moving along.

The oil industry and Federal regulatory authorities, he contends, cannot sit back, contented with present oil reserves.

Panhandle drilled 38 wells in 1941. Of these 29 were producers and 9 dry holes. Two new oil pools were discovered by the company.

The independent oil operators drilled approximately three-fourths of all wells in the United States last year.

Getting new drilling and exploratory equipment has been difficult recently because of restrictions set up in connection with the armament program.

Present estimated crude oil reserves in the United States are 19,580,296,000 barrels. Domestic production last year was 1,404,182,000 barrels.

At this rate of production and consumption, Wilson estimates, there is an indicated oil supply for only 14 years.

Under the present indicated restricted drilling program for 1942, a total of fewer than 17,000 wells will be drilled.

On the basis of new reserves found per well drilled in recent years, the drilling program for 1942 indicates that for the first time in history consumption may exceed discoveries, and the Nation will be drawing on a reserve already too low, the Panhandle chief thinks.

"Government officials have warned the industry that it should anticipate demands upwards of 1,500,000,000 barrels of oil yearly for the duration of the war," says Wilson.

"This is approximately 100,000,000 barrels in excess of 1941 production, which was the highest in the industry's history.

"The present wells are capable of producing a larger volume of oil for a limited period without additional drilling by increasing the monthly allowances now restricted by conservation regulations.

"However, such increase cannot long be maintained without seriously impairing the present reserves.

"Out of 400,061 wells on last December 31, only 48,310 were freely flowing, the balance being produced by pumping or other artificial means.

"A large part of the pumping wells now are producing their maximum capacity and a large percentage are unable to produce the present restricted allowables.

"In order that the industry be able to meet the probable increased war demands, it is necessary that provision be made for resumption of full-scale drilling at the earliest moment equipment and material can be made available."

New Steel Bans Force Plants to Seek War Work

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—The Iron Age said today new restrictions on use of steel in hundreds of consumer products are now closing with crushing force on many scores of metal-working plants and are compelling more sections of industry to realize that to live they must get war work.

"While many plants now facing shutdowns through lack of steel and other materials will not be able to fit into war production," the publication's review said, "others are fighting to get such essential business. Interest in subcontracting is soaring under the impact of the new WPB restriction and demand for information about the priority system—under which the Government controls material distribution—is growing steadily.

"For another week, demand for steel for Army, Navy, Maritime Commision and lend-lease use has broadened, with the emphasis on lend-lease. For the second quarter of 1942, lend-lease steel requirements will far more than double such shipments in the last three months of 1941. Much of this material, earmarked 'rush' is superimposed on the already unprecedented demand for United States agencies.

"Already competition for steel among the big four war consumers is reported and many steel plants this week were running solely on allocated and A-1-A and A-1-B orders. Some producers were able to go down to A-1-F but lower rated business is continually being pushed aside."

War Bond Sales Seen 6 Billion for Year

By the Associated Press

Treasury statisticians figure that war bond sales in the current fiscal year will total about six billion dollars. Next year's goal has been placed unofficially at 11 billion dollars.

Plumbers Seek Trust Trial Delay

Cleveland, April 15 (AP).—Postponement of the antitrust trial of plumbing industry leaders for the war's duration was asked yesterday in a motion filed in Federal court.

Howard F. Burns, attorney representing 21 of the 102 individual and company defendants, asserted the firms are now working on war contracts, installing heating and plumbing equipment in ship yards, munitions plants, war plants, cantonments and housing projects.

The 102 defendants, indicted two years ago, are accused of conspiring for a "restricted system of distribution" which allegedly resulted in 15 to 40 per cent increases in retail costs.

Blanca Renard Gives Recital For Benefit of Piano Fund

By Ray C. B. Brown

Blanca Renard gives a piano recital Wednesday night in the Arts Club for the benefit of the piano fund. Assisting artist: Mary Russell Williams, soprano (Margaret C. Tolson, accompanist.)

Blanca Renard contributed her artistry last evening to the worthy cause of the Arts Club piano fund, and by so doing afforded much pleasure to scores of auditors in the gallery-auditorium. The distinguished Chilean pianist, whose appearances on the stage are too infrequent, was in a communicative mood and played with warmth as well as expertise. Her precision, tonal skill and authoritative style were continuously in evidence, and her share of the program did not seem long enough.

Brown

She began with Mendelssohn's "Serious Variations," which is in many respects that composer's best work for the piano. The theme is unusually sad and poignant for the sunny musician so aptly named Felix, the variations are ingenious and interesting in their contrasts, and the work has a fine structural integrity. Her second offering was a group of Spanish pieces marking her thythmic vitality: a dance by Granados, Falla's "Andalusian Serenade" and a dance from "La Vida Breve." In her last group, devoted to Italian composers, she offered Sgambati's neat pastiche of the classical minute, and two unfamiliar pieces by Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco: "Moon Night" and a tarantelle.

Mary Russell Williams, who assisted in the program, used a fresh and agreeable soprano of lyric quality in two groups of songs. The first contained Bizet's "Vieille Chanson," Henri Duparc's "Extase," Louis Aubert's "Vieille Chanson Espagnole" and Joseph Szulc's "Clair de Lune." In the second were Granados' "Le Maja y el Ruisenor" and "No Ilores Ojuelos," and Rimski-Korsakov's "Aimant la Rose, le rossignol."

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Toccata, Adagio and Fugue in C major (Bach-Ormandy), Symphony No. 7 (Beethoven), Symphony No. 2 (Brahms), Two Nocturnes: "San Juan Capistrano" (Harl McDonald).

Constitution Hall held a large and demonstrative audience last evening at the extra concert which the Philadelphia Orchestra added to the regular series, although the program was not one to attract by the disclosure of novelties or through the presence of a famous soloist. Eugene Ormandy was being strictly educational in his last visit of the season, and provided only the three B's—Bach, Beethoven and Brahms—but he relented to the extent of closing with an American work, "San Juan Capistrano," by the orchestra's manager, Harl McDonald.

The demonstrations of the audience were justified by the excellence of the performance. Although I did not hear the first half of the program, they tell me that the Bach and Beethoven works were excellently done, and I can testify that the second symphony of Brahms was given an eloquent reading. Mr. McDonald's two nocturnes were well worth the hearing, one of them contemplative and reminiscent of the life of the Franciscan padres in the old Californian mission, and the other a bustling and brilliant fiesta. Mr. McDonald's command of instrumentation is constantly growing, and this new score abounds in effective coloration.

I have never taken much stock in the seriousness of Hans von Buelow's constantly repeated remark about the three great B's in music. Apart from his admirable qualities as a character, a pianist, a conductor and a composer, he was a man of infinite jest. His jokes could be as obvious as the scrambling of the titles of two of Wagner's operas into "Lohnhaeuser" and "Tannengruen," or they could be far-fetched puns. As a maker of epigrams, however, he had few rivals in his time, and many of his sayings had a sting.

If Mr. Ormandy is looking for some novel and interesting three B programs, I can suggest some to him. Here are three American programs: (1) Ernest Bacon, Edward Ballentine and Samuel Barber; (2) Samuel Barlow, John Becker and Robert Braine; (3) Cecil Burleigh, Robert Bennett and Henry Brant. I have also, without much trouble, arranged three English programs, three international and one Russian—all of them with composers whose names begin with a B.

By all the signs you'd think that those rootin', tootin', sagebrush and alkali sagas which you hear over WJSV every Thursday night at 8 in "Death Valley Days" were written by some hard-shelled old sourdough who's spent his life in that fairly un-green valley of our great Western spaces.

But, in case you haven't been disillusioned already, this is to inform you that the creator of those saline chronicles is nothing of the sort.

In the first place, the author is a woman. In the second place, she's a native New Englander and a graduate of Vassar—where the prospecting is on a much more refined scale. And, in the third place, she'd never been to Death Valley in her life until she was assigned to write something about it when the series began a small matter of 12 years ago.

Her name is Ruth Cornwall Woodman. She's married to a New York banker. They have two children, ages 9 and 5. And they live in the unalkaline suburb of New York City known as Rye.

Mrs. Woodman was working for a New York advertising agency as a copy writer in 1930 when "Death Valley Days" decided to use that new medium of entertainment—the electric radio—to dramatize some true stories of the West, and she was given the job of doing the scripts.

It was planned to run the series about a year. The then Miss Cornwall made her first trip to Death Valley then, and she found such a richness of story material in that supposedly arid region that she's been writing them ever since.

Contract

"Am I qualified to bid four spades at once with this hand?" asks Mrs. C. D. H. Here are her cards:

♠ Q 10 9 8
◇ K J 10
♣ A 8

Not vulnerable, a four-spade bid is satisfactory and even desirable with this hand. While we usually think of a preemptive bid as having a nearly solid suit, surely Mrs. C. D. H.'s cards will be more useful at a spade contract than anywhere else.

The strategists say, "The best defense is a good offense," and in this case a four-spade call will certainly put a crimp in the adversaries' bidding.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

GEE, KING; YOU MUST HAVE KNOWN GRIMES WAS THE MURDERER BEFORE WE GAVE HIM THE HOT FOOT! BUT HOW—
I KNEW FROM GRIMES, HIMSELF, WHEN HE ADMITTED THAT ED TOLD HIM ABOUT SETTING THE DEATH TRAP TO GET THE STOCK THIEF!
THEN REMEMBER THE SNOWSHOES I FOUND IN THE BUSHES. GRIMES TRIED TO IMPLY THAT HIS VICTIM, ED, MADE THE TRACKS—
—BUT WE HAD ED HERE IN THE CABIN WHEN THOSE TRACKS WERE MADE! WITH SNOW THIS DEEP NO MAN WOULD THROW AWAY HIS WEBS—
—UNLESS HE HAD SOMETHING TO RIDE IN—AND THAT WAS GRIMES' SLEIGH!
